What does an actor of Brian Cox's virtuosity do when the part of a lifetime comes to an end? When the hit drama Succession reached its final series and the monstrous Logan Roy was laid to rest, he tells us, "The answer was simple do something completely different."

007: Road to a Million is very different to a drama about a media mogul, but it has all the trappings of luxury and travel you would associate with Cox's former day job. And the Bond franchise wouldn't put its name to a TV show without it being bigger, better and more lavish than any previous reality show.

Nine pairs of contestants travel to exotic locations associated with the Bond movies where they try to outwit Cox's "Controller" - a character straight out of the Bond villain mould - and win a total prize pot of £9 million. Did we say it was lavish?

Back in real life, on page 22, make sure you read RT columnist Caroline Frost's candid interview with comedian Rhod Gilbert, who has made a documentary about his treatment for head and neck cancer. Then turn to page 29 to read Caroline's column and her take on the profusion of such programmes on TV.

We also catch up with Ashley Jensen, who has the unenviable task of taking over from Douglas Henshall in the new series of Shetland. And we talk to ex-Doctor Who Jodie Whittaker, who stars in series two of Jimmy McGovern's prison drama, Time.

RADIO The Haunter of the Dark

Monday-Friday 10.45pm Radio 4A fourth series of the drama written by Julian Simpson and inspired by the work of American author HP Lovecraft. It's now three years since Heawood disappeared, but Kennedy (Jana Carpenter) is still searching for him.

The A-list cast of Apple TV+'s The Morning Show, including Jennifer Aniston, Reese Witherspoon and Greta Lee, isn't the only newsworthy thing about this drama set in a fictional US television network. The outfits - from cashmere jumpers to power suits - play significant roles, too. To find out more, we talked to the costume designers.

Meet Sophie de Rakoff, who dresses Reese Witherspoon's character, who has worked with Jennifer Aniston since Friends and styles her as Alex; and Beth (Elizabeth) Lancaster, who joined this series to dress Greta Lee as Stella.

How do you explore characters through their costumes?

SOPHIE At the start of the show. there was a lot of talk about power dynamics - trousers versus suits versus dresses, and what those mean symbolically. On-screen in the US, female anchors were "degendered" at one stage, but Fox News really changed how they dressed, with colour and the > return of femininity. DEBRA I didn't design the first season of The Morning Show, in which Jen's > > character Alex is very guarded and, literally, very buttoned up. By season three, she's in a powerful position and I felt it was important to show her body. We see a lot of her arms and she wears this long, sleeveless, skin-tight dress. It's storytelling in a subtle way. BETH Stella [the network president] comes from the tech world, so she's used to being "personality-forward". She can be playful, but she's also telegraphing the fact she can make these more casual choices - say, a Loewe hoodie under a suit - because she's in that top office. People report to her in suits and heels, but she could wear sneakers if she wanted.

Where do you source the costumes from?

DEBRA For season three, Sophie and I went into every store in New York. We had a fantastic morning alone in Bergdorf Goodman.

SOPHIE It was beyond! Our show is set in an elevated contemporary world and we have a ton of characters to dress. The death of "bricks and mortar" [shops] is interesting, because I was used to touching everything. It's a more difficult process now. Some things haven't changed, though - if you can't find something, you make it yourself.

Did any of the actors sneak their costumes home with them? DEBRA Jen did the opposite! We do the fittings at her house and I'll have 50 pairs of trousers with me, but she'll often say, "Wait!", and off she goes to find the perfect pair in her closet. Jen really knows herself - it's very unusual, I think, for an actor to be that physically aware. She has a very good idea of what feels right for Alex in any given scene.

Is Reese the same?

SOPHIE Their processes are very different, but Deb and I both have a multi-decade relationship with Jen and Reese respectively, which means there's a shorthand, it's very streamlined. I know what's going to work on Reese and what isn't, although things still go astray.

How did you each get into costume design?

DEBRA This is my third career - I was previously a fine-artist and a fashion designer. I'd say that I walked into doors that opened up. I worked on Friends for a decade.

SOPHIE I fell into costume design by mistake when I moved from the UK to the States in 1990. I was a journalist in New York and needed a job when I moved to LA, so worked so iconic! At the start of your As you get more established, you start worrying about what could go wrong. Were you surprised, Sophie, that - prior to the film Barbie, at least - vou couldn't discuss the colour pink without having to refer to Legally Blonde?

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

JOEL DOMMETT

The stand-up turned shiny-floor host talks getting down and dirty on the revived Survivor

At the turn of this century, the nascent reality show genre offered a choice between Big Brother's locked-in tension and the escapism of Survivor. Yet while Channel 4's domestic "social experiment" took off like a rocket, ITV's desert-island elimination format lasted just two series in the UK. But 21 years on, hot on the heels of ITV2's Big Brother reboot, Survivor is back and now on the BBC, with 18 people whisked away to the Dominican Republic, split into tribes and undertaking physical and mental challenges with £100,000 up for grabs.

Following his own reality ordeal on I'm a Celebrity... in 2016, comedian and Masked Singer host Joel Dommett turns gamekeeper as master of ceremonies.

A varied cast of ordinary people indulging in skulduggery to eliminate their fellow contestants. Is there something of The

We're going to get comparisons to Traitors, Alone, I'm a Celebrity, even Love Island. But sitting around the fire pit and voting each other off that was a Survivor format point first! All these other shows all over the world were born

'It feels really diverse, and they all go through absolute hell!' JOEL DOMMETT > format back in 2001. But I'd say The Traitors definitely warmed up the BBC audience for Survivor. And, like you say, it's a great mix of contestants - it feels really diverse, and they all go through absolute hell!

Unlike Claudia Winkleman on The Traitors, you're really embedded with the contestants, commenting on their challenges. Did you feel closer to them because of that? I really loved spending time with them, but I felt more like I was a viewer - I got so wrapped up in it in the moment, which hopefully comes across as endearing, and pulls viewers along with the excitement.

Why do you think Survivor didn't really catch on first time round?

Compared to Big Brother, it felt too "unBritish" at that point in time it's very much about gameplay, alliances and a bit of trickiness between contestants. It was the other way round in America, which has had 45 series of Survivor now, and over 600 episodes.

Since then, we've had I'm a Celebrity... Get Me out of Here!, Love Island, The Island with Bear Grylls and Alone – why bring back Survivor?

Even though it feels like we're late on the scene here in the UK, it was basically the first reality show, and we're now well versed in that gameplay. No offence to any other shows, but we want something a bit more interesting than people just sitting around having a beer.

What's the secret of Survivor's American success?

Simplicity – it's people surviving on an island and avoiding being voted off. That's it. But over the course of a series, you can bring in extra layers. It's only as complicated as you want to make it.

Despite its longevity, did it feel like you were reinventing it from scratch?

In the States, they're so used to that format, they have to just throw the kitchen sink at it, with all these massive format twists and turns. We weren't going to do that straight off the bat because we have to treat it like a new show and get viewers familiar with it. We can take the best bits and just roll with it, with our own spin on it.

The Masked Singer, The National Television Awards, In with a Shout and now Survivor. When you started out in stand-up, did you ever imagine you'd be this ubiquitous on our screens?

As my wife will tell you, I'm a workaholic. It feels unbelievably lucky that this is where I've found myself. I didn't think presenting was going to feel as exciting as stand-up, but it really does because of the variety of things I get to do. I love doing Masked Singer because it appeals to everyone from three to 87. But with Survivor, I got to look different physically – I grew out my beard and got down and dirty.

Will stand-up ever take a back seat to your presenting work?

Stand-up is still the trunk of the tree, and everything else is like a little branch. It gives me confidence, it keeps me sharp. I can go out and test the NTAs opening monologue at clubs around town. I'm not a controversial comic at all, but it feels fun just to be able to say things that I can't say on Masked Singer or Survivor – and also in a narcissistic way, it's nice to go out and talk about myself instead of talking about contestants!

What do you think you bring to Survivor as a host?

I'll admit I'm probably a little bit more "Saturday night light entertainment" than a lot of the other countries' hosts. But hopefully you look at me and go, "Well, it looks like he would be able to do the challenges and enjoy it."

So are you saying you could survive Survivor?

I would definitely enjoy the physical challenges more than the mind games – I'd fall apart on those. My favourites are those endurance challenges, which get bigger as the series goes on. But I couldn't do them for long because I'm immediately dripping in sweat. And what the contestants put themselves through is insane – no food, no sleep. I can't even hold my coffee cup if I've had less than eight hours! ROBIN PARKER

My forgotten hero

He played Martin Luther King Jr in the Oscarnominated movie Selma, now
David Oyelowo is stepping into the spurs of a very different historical figure: 19th-century lawman Bass Reeves, a real-life black deputy marshal who some say was the inspiration for the Lone Ranger.

"From my research, I actually don't think that he was the inspiration," Oyelowo admits. "But what I would say is, when you look at the Lone Ranger, Bass Reeves is probably the only historical figure worthy of the comparison. And I think that, in and of itself, is significant."

After escaping slavery during the US Civil War, Reeves went on the run and learnt Native American languages, before being freed and hired as a US deputy marshal in 1875, the first black man to hold the position west of the Mississippi River. Over his 32-year career he was rumoured to have apprehended more than 3,000 criminals, and became a legend for never being injured – despite having his hat shot from his head more than once.

Reeves's tale has been touched on before on TV, most recently in Sky Atlantic's Watchmen, Around the World in 80 Days on BBC1 and the Netflix film The Harder They Fall, but he's never been a central figure – and Oyelowo thinks that, given his achievements, he's been unfairly forgotten by history.

"The only reason I can find why we haven't had myriad Bass Reeves movies and TV shows, and animated-this, that and the other is because he's black and the fact that those narratives have been marginalised."

Now though, Reeves's story is firmly centre stage in the new Paramount+ drama, Lawmen: Bass Reeves (a spin-off of sorts from the streamer's popular Yellowstone series and prequel 1883), which co-stars Donald Sutherland, Dennis Quaid and Garrett Hedlund and was filmed in Fort Worth, Texas.

"Whether it's the production design, costumes, hair, make-up, the script itself, an enormous amount of work has gone into making sure it's as historically accurate as possible," Oyelowo says. "The other day, we had so many horses and wagons and 305 extras on set, but between each take there was only a two to three-minute reset before everything was back in position and ready to shoot again."

In other words, it's been a mammoth undertaking to finally bring Reeves's story back to life – and the star says that it's only in the current climate that such a project could have happened.

"It's taken the sheer amount of cultural shifts that we have witnessed recently. Not only for there to be a desire to tell the story, but the desire to tell it on this scale." HUW FULLERTON

Lawmen: Bass Reeves is on Paramount+ from 5 November. David Oyelowo was speaking before the SAG-AFTRA actors' strike

VIEWPOINT

SHAME OF EMPIRE

The existence of "human zoos" defined attitudes to race that lasted into the modern era, says novelist Nadifa Mohamed

It is an episode of our history that has been largely forgotten. During the growth of the British Empire newly colonised peoples were shipped to these shores and displayed in human zoos in front of millions. The spectacles – in British parks and theatres – thrived in Victorian times and into the 20th century. They are perhaps deemed too embarrassing to discuss today, but it's important to acknowledge them – they shaped Britain's attitude to race and the rest of the world.

According to the entrepreneurs behind these lucrative shows, they would bring to life the civilising mission of the British Empire and the superiority of the white race; they re-created colonial battles with British actors as hero conquerors. Foreign performers were asked to simulate their lives in "native villages".

Working on my Channel 4 documentary, Britain's Human Zoos, the scientific underbelly to these shows was a particularly disturbing revelation. Ethnic groups from around the world were made available to scientists and anthropologists to be examined and categorised according to race science. Today, some of our museums, universities and medical schools are implicated in the history of human zoos and the exploitation of their performers.

In 1905, six Bambuti people were brought to Britain from Belgian Congo [by an East Yorkshire-based soldier and big-game hunter called Colonel James Harrison]. The four men and two women were from a pygmy ethnic group and of particular fascination to British audiences. With their sell-out performances at the London Hippodrome and national tour, they became celebrities and met royalty at Buckingham Palace and MPs at Westminster, but they were also handed over to leading scientists.

N ONE PHOTO of Amuriape, one of the Bambuti women, she is stripped naked and posed on a leopard skin with markers on her body. All I could see was a scared-looking 31-year-old woman in a hostile, foreign environment. I was devastated to find out that when Amuriape gave birth to a stillborn girl in Luton in 1906 the baby's body was taken while "scarcely cold", almost certainly without her consent and dissected by the president of the Royal Anthropological Institute, who then gifted it to the Hunterian Museum in London.

The fact that one half of Amuriape's baby is still at the Hunterian and was still available for medical research until we approached the museum – it responded saying that no permission would be granted for the foreseeable future "given the sensitivities of this case" – made me realise how much of the history of human zoos has seeped into our present. The last human zoo was held in Brussels in 1958 and this unsettling part of history has important consequences; all the performers brought to this country were described as "savages" and that kind of language is still used, to describe non-Western people, by the extreme right on social media today.

HE FACT THAT this form of entertainment was still so popular during the birth of film has had a huge impact on the way that Black and Asian characters have been presented on screen. In my novels, I've placed marginalised people at the centre of the story, with their own dreams and agency.

It is important to understand what the performers wanted from the experience. There was an opportunity for these travelling shows to bring together individuals from vastly different worlds and allow them to connect in a meaningful way beyond the racist tropes of the time.

The overwhelming reality, though, was of a damaging and humiliating experience for performers and a distorted and negative attitude to the "other" in British audiences.

Nadifa Mohamed presents Britain's Human Zoos, Saturday 9.25pm C4

 \triangleleft available if they all make it through.

At the heart of it all is a shadowy puppet master called "the Controller", who sets questions and watches from his lair: inspired by classic Bond villains such as Blofeld, and played by Cox. "Now I can finally say I've been in a Bond production!" Cox says. "I always thought I'd be a very good villain but nobody's ever offered. Having played one of the most misunderstood men in television history [in Succession], it was a no-brainer to be a Bond villain of sorts."

EW WOULD HAVE put money on the plain-speaking, classically trained Scottish thesp starring in a reality show, but Cox says he was looking for "a bit of fun" after an intense five years inhabiting the almost-permanently furious billionaire mogul, Logan Roy.

The role allows him to once again flex the skills he showed in Succession: the Controller is stern but cerebral and witty, and enjoys toying with the contestants, not unlike the way Logan Roy played his children off against each other as they squabbled over who would take over the running of his media empire.

"I was probably one of the first to know that [Succession] was going to finish and I thought, 'They're killing me off, so what do I do next?'" he says. "As you get older, life becomes increasingly ridiculous so you either laugh or you cry, and I prefer the laughter. And I really enjoyed it. I don't know if 'risk' is the right word but certainly it's unusual territory for me. I thought it could be funny.

"You keep it bouncy and you keep the variety rather than thinking, 'I must go off and do something heavy now.' I couldn't do 50 years of Poirot or whatever. It's fantastic but [David Suchet] did it over a very long period of time. I couldn't."

Of course, this isn't Cox's first spy game. He may never have been a Bond villain, but from 2002 he did play CIA boss Ward Abbott in the Bourne trilogy, which is widely credited with reviving the espionage genre that was, at the time, in danger of looking a bit passé. And Cox agrees with many critics at the time who thought that Matt Damon's Jason Bourne may have inspired Daniel Craig's Bond, who appeared four years later as a tougher, darker 007.

"[The Bourne Identity] was a bit more modern," he says. "Then Dan inhabited Bond brilliantly. But lately I've been looking back at the Bond films from the 60s onwards, which has been wonderful. They have a style that was really endearing and mapped a particular period of my life."

Cox praises the third Bond star, Roger Moore, as being one of his favourites, calling him "witty". Yet the older Bond films face accusations of not being politically correct. Does Cox think it's fine

'It's unusual territory for me. I thought it could be funny' to still show them, even if they contain language and attitudes we wouldn't use today?

"Yeah, I think that's OK," he says, "because the only way we can understand who we are is by acknowledging our history. Look what's happening in the world today: if we had a real sense of who we are, we wouldn't have had the idiotic clown from Eton [Boris Johnson] or the Pink Pinocchio [Donald Trump] or Borsch and Tears [Vladimir Putin].

"People have disclaimers now on some older programming which is fine, but at the same time, it's a wonderful tradition that we try to carry on. We don't muck around with Shakespeare; we shouldn't muck around with James Bond."

These days, the lines between big and small screen have blurred. With movie-size budgets available on streaming services, we increasingly see film stars and studios heading to TV, whether that's Hollywood big-hitters Nicole Kidman, Reese Witherspoon and Harrison Ford joining streaming shows, or Disney transferring their Star Wars and Marvel superheroes to television.

But this is the first time a multi-million pound global franchise like Bond has dipped its toes into reality TV – and Eon agreed partly because the show is visually spectacular, filmed on the sweeping cinematic scale Bond is known for.

CCORDING TO BOND producer and 007:
Road to a Million executive producer
Gregg Wilson, it was important to strike a balance between having a Bond theme – including certain Bond props as little "Easter eggs" for fans, for example, and filming at real Bond locations – but not muddying the waters by including characters like Bond himself, M or Q.

"It would be breaking through the fourth wall to have characters from the movie franchise," Wilson says. "Our contestants are real people and if they interacted with people from a fictional world, it would feel strange. So it all takes place in the real world, but there's this Bond villain puppet master who is dangling prize money in front of these contestants in very outlandish ways. Brian has really elevated it to the next level."

Those "real people" contestants rubbing shoulders in Jamaica with the glamorous casino clientele include two cockney brothers, emergency care nurses and a couple who've rarely been abroad, having had three children soon after getting married.

"A lot of the ideas that have been proposed to us over the years have been people trying to be James Bond," Wilson says. "When we shoot our films with elaborate action sequences, it's complicated, and it's difficult to do that at a reduced budget in order to do it safely. We have a very low appetite for risk, despite our films appearing to be the opposite. So it was refreshing to have a proposal that was more about falling in love with these contestants.

"You'll get sucked in because it's Bond and it's exciting and there's great sums of money involved, but the thing you'll fall in love with are these real-life people."

Bond's series producer Barbara Broccoli agrees. "For me, the most joy has been watching the emotional rollercoaster of their journeys. I was very moved getting to know the contestants and was in awe of their bravery in confronting some of their deepest fears."

O, HAS COX been bitten by the reality bug: might we see him make a more permanent move to entertainment now? Will he take over from Claudia Winkleman in The Traitors, or show us his paso doble on Strictly?

Unlikely. He's currently playing Bach in The Score at the Theatre Royal Bath, which ends its run this Saturday. He says it contains a night-marish number of lines. "I wanted to see if I still had any theatre chops. The last time I did a play [The Great Society in 2019], they played a dirty trick. It was going to be a dramatised reading, which meant that I didn't have to learn any lines. But after the first week of rehearsals they said, 'It's going so well we've decided to do a full production,' and I said, 'I'm never going to know the whole thing in two weeks, forget it!' So they gave me an ear-piece and a lovely guy fed me the lines.

"It was a bit of a cheat. As you get older, you might need assistance in certain ways, but I'm trying to still do it without any help."

Still, whatever comes next, and even if Road to a Million is a massive hit, Cox has made peace with one hard-to-deny fact: he'll probably be remembered chiefly as Succession's Logan Roy for the rest of his career.

"When I left the show [at the start of the final series], people were writing to say, 'We're not going to watch any more,' and I'd think, 'Well, it's called Succession – this is the succession bit you've been waiting for, for four seasons, so you should stick with it now!'"

"Not that I'm ungrateful," Cox adds. "Logan was one of the greatest roles ever – and it

Following Douglas Henshall's departure, Ashley Jensen arrives as the new detective on Shetland – and she couldn't be happier

HERE'S SOMETHING SUNSHINE about Ashley Jensen. You can feel it when she arrives in a busy, buzzy London café, upbeat and beaming. No sooner has she sat down than she's cooing over my dog – who has all but abandoned me to take up residence at her feet – and proudly showing me photographs on her phone of her golden retrievers.

Later, when I ask Sharon Horgan, who cast her in Catastrophe, what Jensen brings to a character, she says Jensen has a gift for "making characters feel true" and "aside from being the loveliest, warmest person, Ashley has wattage".

That warm wattage glows in the parts for which Jensen is best known. As Maggie in Extras she was the sweet counterpoint to Ricky Gervais's cynical, curmudgeonly Andy. As Ugly Betty's Christina, she was a bright and breezy bestie to the eponymous Betty. As the detective lead in Agatha Raisin, she is waspish but never cold; she has the heart of an optimist.

It's in her voice, too, whether she's lending it to animated characters (a flirtatious frog in Gnomeo and Juliet or a dogged dog in Disney's 2019's live action/CGI remake of Lady and the Tramp), telling tales of eye-watering ailments on Channel 4's Embarrassing Bodies, or even selling settees in adverts for an apparently never-ending sofa sale. To sound reassuring when discussing the world's worst verrucas, or half-price three-piece suites, as Jensen does, is quite the feat.

Jensen's sunniness is a consequence of how she lives her life. She guards her privacy carefully and surrounds herself with good people: "I like people who communicate, who are open, who are honest."

Jimmy Perez

And while she says she feels classless ("I'm not intimidated. I could be plonked anywhere and get on with anyone"), she describes a foundational "working-class sensibility – work hard, have a bit of humility and never take anything for granted".

She attributes this to "starting at the bottom and serving an apprenticeship in theatre for years and years."

I first met Jensen 25 years ago, when she was a jobbing theatre actor in Scotland, and she was bright-eyes-and-blue-skies then. "I think you have to try and be in the here and now, be as present as possible. You have to crack on with it. So that's what I do. And all you can do is be the best you can be, in the moment, as a flawed human being. You get to a certain age in life when you accept that you're not perfect – and you have to stop beating yourself up for it.

"And my face looks better when I smile. But I think everyone's does." Sunshine is just who she is, even in tragedy; her partner of 18 years, husband for ten and father to her 14-year-old son, actor Terence Beesley, took his own life in 2017. This warmth and positivity is at odds with Jensen's latest role, however, as the new lead in BBC1's Shetland. Following the departure of Douglas Henshall's DI Jimmy Perez, Jensen plays DI Ruth Calder, a Met police officer and a native Shetlander, absent from the islands for 20 years, who is forced to return in \triangleright pursuit of a witness who is also being chased by two hitmen.

A prodigal return, this is not. Indeed, Calder's reluctance to be home is matched only by her colleague DI Alison "Tosh" McIntosh's (Alison O'Donnell) bemusement at her discomfort. In the first episode of the new series, Jensen doesn't smile once. Calder is what Scots would call "crabbit". "The wee morose look of Ruth Calder!" Jensen cackles with delight, teasing that Calder will smile eventually. Probably. Just not yet.

"Because she's from Shetland and she left – for reasons that will become clear as the series goes on - she has history with the place and existing characters, which make her feel familiar. It's a really clever way to introduce a new character."

ENSEN SAID YES to the part on reading one script. "It was so beautifully written and Ruth so well rounded and interesting, it was a no-brainer. Plus, I really wanted to go to Shetland." And there's the kudos of course. "When I started out, there was only the BBC, ITV and Channel 4. The BBC was the one that set the standard, and still does in a lot of ways. Something like Shetland is the standard. It's so classy and for me to be asked to be part of a flagship BBC show was... wow!"

Wasn't it also daunting? "It's a show that's got such a big fanbase and going into something as loved as Shetland could be overwhelming, Jensen admits. "I could have been intimidated. But for my own sanity, I had to think of it as a six-part series and focus on playing my story."

Some of that fanbase have grumbled about Jensen joining Shetland and usurping the "rightful" heir to the Henshall/Perez crown -Tosh. But Jensen is having none of it. "I love working with Alison and bringing in my character shines a light on Tosh, so we see a different side to her. Of course, there will be people

Expressing some bemusement at the thought of women who work together being catty with each other, Jensen says, "It's lovely that it's two women leading the show."

She adds: "As an actor, all you've got is yourself. The way I work is to take an element of myself and expand upon it." So what element of herself has she expanded upon to

'There will be people who miss Dougie, but two women leading the show is lovely' play Calder - whom she describes as "sometimes snippy, frustrated, defensive and not that nice"?

"I came from a small town, Annan [in Dumfries and Galloway, south-west Scotland, which is reminiscent of Ruth. She definitely wanted to escape from Shetland - and escape from who she was when she was there. It wasn't quite like that for me, but I always knew that I was a creative person and it was difficult to be creative in a small town in Scotland. I wanted to get out and explore different places, be it Edinburgh or Glasgow, London or LA."

Jensen's journey took her farther than she ever imagined. "I never thought I'd be on the telly. For me, being an actress meant being on stage, doing plays. My idea of success was, and is, being able to support myself as an actress.

> Mission accomplished. But did that make the journey back to > > Scotland more complicated? Is she one of the many ex-pat Scots who is intensely proud of their homeland as long as they don't have to go there?

"Returning to Scotland felt like going home," she says firmly. "Work hadn't taken me there for a long time until Mayflies, then along came Shetland. For a while, I was conflicted about it, about where I was from. But, I think I needed to see more before I could really appreciate Scotland. Then, when I was back, I ran around buying plain loaves, Scotch pies and Tunnock's teacakes. Now I feel as if I'm settled back with it. I was very happy to be there, with a renewed appreciation for the square sausage."

Before our time is up, we talk about Mayflies, Andrea Gibb's BBC1 adaptation in 2022 of Andrew O'Hagan's novel about life, love and loss. Days after we meet, Jensen will be nominated for a Scottish Bafta for her role as Anna. "I found it very difficult to read," she says, "because it was all there in Andrea Gibb's sublime writing. You just had to say the words and the feelings came. It was poetic, incredibly sad but weirdly uplifting. I can well up talking about it."

ND SUDDENLY WE'RE both welling up talking about it. Then there's a moment when neither of us says anything. It's an eloquent silence that articulates how Mark Bonnar describes Jensen. They first worked together at the National Theatre in 1998, and then played estranged husband and wife in the comedy series Catastrophe, from 2015 to 2019. "Ashley can be heartbreaking and hilarious in the same moment, showing strength and vulnerability simultaneously," he says. "Simply, she is a truth-teller".

Jensen herself is more diffident. "I know my limitations and that's OK. Maybe five per cent of actors can choose to do whatever they want, but most of us don't have that luxury. All I've got is this face and this voice, and I'm doing OK. Shetland is the first 'drama' I've led [as opposed to the comedic Agatha Raisin and when you're leading a show, you're there because people want you there. How the day goes is down to you, to a great extent. Your mood and behaviour infect everyone else on the set. It's a responsibility - and it's not a responsibility I could have coped with when I was younger. So I'm grateful it's happening now. For me, it's about the here and now."

So Jensen won't be drawn on her longer-term future on Shetland? "I never look too far ahead," she smiles. Still, something tells me that the

The second series of Jimmv McGovern's Baftawinning drama Time is set in a women's prison and begins with three very different inmates arriving at Carlingford Prison on the same day: working-class mum-of-two Orla (Doctor Who and Broadchurch's Jodie Whittaker); drug addict Kelsey (Game of Thrones and The Last of Us star Bella Ramsev); and rich Abi (The Silent Twins' Tamara Lawrance).

JODIE WHITTAKER

Why did you say yes to this role?

When the email heading says "Time Season Two", you don't even need to continue reading. The best things I've been involved in have been ensemble, with faces that we recognise: Doctor Who, Broadchurch. I love the feeling that this isn't anything without everyone. In Time, every character is necessary. Our storylines intertwine, but our experiences of prison are completely different.

Orla's story seems so unfair: she's in prison just for fiddling her electricity meter.

I'm not saying she didn't break the law, but the domino effect of the decision to send her to prison and the lives ruined because of that are explored brilliantly. She's a lioness. This isn't a mother who has put her children at risk. She has kept her children out of risk by providing a safe and healthy environment. Who benefits from sending Orla to jail? Not one person. You as a member of the community are not protected because Orla's off the streets: she's not that kind of criminal. The prisons are full and three children are without their mother.

Is it realistic that someone can be imprisoned for such a minor crime?

She calls it "fiddling the leccy", but she's not just tweaked a

There's a scene where Orla starts her period but she doesn't have any sanitary towels. It's very hard-hitting. That's my favourite scene I've ever shot. I said, "Is this going to be suggested, or is it going to be shot exactly how it's written?" And it was shot exactly how I felt it should be - unapologetically. Showing the blood was so important. It's brilliant because it tells you what comes for free in prison, what doesn't, and what's a commodity. Dehumanisation is absolutely in the fabric of the system.

Orla's kids visit her in prison. What did this thing where she'd grab onto me when they were taking her away and she wouldn't let go. I didn't know that was going to happen. That sent me over the edge because it's awful. A massive cry is a massive cry, even if it's fake. It still has the same effect on your body.

Do you find that hard to

If I could shed everything, I wouldn't be me. That's why I'm an actor: it's the only job where I wouldn't get fired for being the way I am, which is filled up with lots of exhausting energy.

You're very funny in real life and in your role as Doctor Who. Would vou consider doing comedy?

If someone asked me to audition for a comedy I'd say no, as it's out of my comfort zone. Doctor Who was different because I wasn't playing comedy, I was just playing myself! That character made my life because I was allowed every twitch and fidget that I usually have to rein in. Drama terrifies me, but there's a comfort in the fear. I do love to find the humour in whatever I do, though, because you can't have three hours of misery.

knob in her home, she's got involved with a syndicate. But last winter there were people making millions in bonuses, and single parents couldn't heat their houses.

Does that make you furious?

I mean, dude, obviously! Which is why I'm a fan of Jimmy McGovern. We've got very similar politics.

shake off afterwards?

BELLA RAMSEY plays KELSEY

Did you watch the first series of Time, starring Sean Bean and Stephen Graham?

No, but when I did, I was like, "Woah, now I understand what I'm working on." What a thing to follow.

Why did you say yes to playing Kelsey?

This was the first time I was offered a role rather than being invited to audition, which was an honour but very scary. I didn't think I could do it. That feeling continued all through rehearsals. There are some characters that feel like they're already inside of me, but Kelsey didn't feel like that initially. I still had no idea if I could do it – up until the first scene ended and they shouted, "Cut," I thought, "OK, I think it's fine – I can do it."

How would vou describe Kelsev?

She's incredibly mature and savvy but also a child. She plays the system to an extent but she's a vulnerable, lost person who needs support and hasn't received it.

How did you prepare for the role?

I went to a prison and met a woman who had been in and out of the prison system from Kelsey's age. It was really helpful when she spoke about She described how you need the hit with every cell in your body, so whenever Kelsey was withdrawing from heroin I thought about that.

Did you find those scenes difficult?

There was one scene which was very heavy. I got too into it; I was starting to lose my sense of self and it was weird. I got back to my little apartment and I was fidgety, so I watched Finding Nemo. That solved it! I find it very easy to get meshed with any character, so sometimes you have to do something fun to get yourself out of it.

This was the first project where my mum hadn't come as a chaperone, so the reality of putting some washing on and making food after a day's filming was a bit of a shock to the system! But I was glad to have the chance to do that. It felt like maturing.

There's a scene where the other inmates hold Kelsey down and assault her to retrieve a wrap of heroin that she's smuggled in. Was that hard?

and Stephen Graham were the stars of me series on

We had amazing intimacy co-ordinators, but your body doesn't know the difference between what's real and what's not, so the physical trauma of that was intense. The adrenaline carries you through the whole day, but I got home that night absolutely exhausted.

What do you think the scripts are trying to say about the prison system?

The story really lends itself to the idea of the system not being fair a lot of the time, and there being a lot of judgement from outside. I think we have a tendency to be, like, "You're in prison, you're a criminal," but the strength of Time is getting to know the prisoners' stories and understanding how they ended up there. These stories deserve to be heard and respected.

Do you think prisons need to be reformed?

These systems are also businesses at their core, which is always complex. When there's something that is monetary mixed in with humanity and very vulnerable people, that's tricky. There's a tendency in prison drama to make prison wardens into baddies, but what I loved about the scripts was being able to see the humanity in the officers.

How did you enjoy working with Jodie and Tamara?

I loved watching how they work. And we messed about so much: I think you have to when it's very dark material. We'd sing and make videos, conga onto set, then shoot something about the deepest, darkest truths of life.

INTERVIEWS BY EMMA COX

It gave me a sense of purpose

When comedian Rhod Gilbert was diagnosed with cancer and about to embark on months of gruelling treatment, he invited a film crew to follow every step

THE RT INTERVIEW BY CAROLINE FROST

OR NEARLY TWO decades, his fans have been aware of "Rhod Gilbert: Comedian" – the amiable but pin-sharp Welsh host of Never Mind the Buzzcocks in 2014, the presenter of Rhod Gilbert's Work Experience and a stalwart of panel shows.

For several months last year, however, he was "Rhodri Gilbert, 18.10.68", a patient of Velindre Cancer Centre in Cardiff, where he underwent treatment for metastatic cancer of the head and neck, which was diagnosed sufficiently early that he was able to be treated with surgery, followed by sessions of chemotherapy and radiotherapy. It was during the first of these, in July 2022, that Gilbert realised he was going to have to let the public know what was going on.

"I'm not a social media person, but I was in hospital and so many people walked past me and pointed, I thought, 'How long can I keep this secret?'" he remembers. "So that day, I made the announcement that I was having treatment and I'd be disappearing for a while."

This came a few months after his first symptoms – choking, coughing, convulsions, sore throats that wouldn't go away – had presented themselves, and a defining moment during a fundraising walk for, ironically, the very same Velindre Centre of which he had been a patron for over ten years. "A tumour popped up on my neck that day," he says. "You could see it, so I got it biopsied, which led to my diagnosis, and then we were off to the races."

Those races comprised his initial surgery before three weeks' recovery, providing a sperm sample for ongoing IVF treatment with his wife Sian – "my last chance to knock one out," he grins – then six weeks of chemo- and radiotherapy. By then cameras were following him for every session ("except the sperm sample," he adds quickly), Gilbert having teamed up with a documentary crew he'd worked with previously.

"I was lying in bed on the Friday, with my treatment due to start the following Monday. I rang the team I knew – there was no broadcaster on board, it was all on spec – and I asked, 'How would you fancy joining me on this journey?"

HY DID HE want to put this experience down on film? Gilbert is refreshingly honest about his motivations. "It was partly for me. I'd cancelled all my TV work and tours, and I wanted to have something other than 'cancer' in my diary. I knew I wouldn't be well enough to go on stage or TV, but I thought I might be well enough to lie in bed and talk to a documentary team about how ill I was. I thought, 'It will give me something to do.'

"Also, by that point, I'd found out my cancer had been caused by the HPV virus, something we vaccinate kids for. At every turn, I thought, 'I can do something here, which might actually change things.' So it was partly for me and partly for others, but I wouldn't be able to give you the percentages."

The cameras recorded Gilbert's gruelling treatment that saw him bed-bound between sessions. He starts hesitantly to describe the motion sickness caused by his chemotherapy, the fatigue brought on by radiotherapy, but when I tell \triangleright nothing I need tell you, then," he chuckles, and we share a smile. "It's all about balancing the meds, isn't it?"

The documentary also catches frequent glimpses of the humour that has secured his fame and fortune. Was that a defence mechanism, or did Gilbert find certain aspects of the process genuinely darkly funny?

"What do you do?" he shrugs. "It's in my nature to see jokes, put punchlines on things. And because I had cameras with me, I was probably putting on a bit of a performance. But it's what humans do. That's our armour. We try to disarm the whole thing by making ourselves and others laugh. Cancer is a lot less scary if your oncologist is laughing with you. It takes the sting out of some of the moments."

'Cancer is less scary if your oncologist is laughing with you'

Gilbert is saving some of the worst things well-meaning people have said to him for his next tour: "I have a whole section dedicated to that. Generally, people tie themselves up in knots trying not to say the wrong thing, which means inevitably they put their foot in it. From the thousands of people I've met, though, I think most people prefer to be open. The one thing to remember is that it's very difficult to say something that would make it worse."

He can pinpoint the best thing more readily. "I was back on the road earlier this year. I got a call to say my latest scan had shown the cancer was in the areas they knew about, but it wasn't in my lungs or my brain. I told my consultant, 'This is the best day of my life.' If you'd told me that three months earlier..." he trails off. "Well, everything becomes relative."

And more good news has followed recently, with Gilbert receiving his first clear scan. "The best thing was that the tumour had gone, and it was once again an ordinary blood vessel."

He has also been buoyed by the love of the people around him throughout the past 18 months. "I had a remarkable group of friends. They created a rota system to take me to and from hospital, which meant someone taking half a day out of their lives once every six weeks." At home, he was cared for by his wife, comedian and writer Sian Harries, although viewers of his documentary will only see her in the closing scenes. "She didn't want to be in the doc, it was too much to look after me and to also be on camera. The caring for me was enough, which I appreciate."

ESPITE THIS SUPPORT, he acknowledges now that those months were not the easiest. "I wasn't well enough even to read or watch television, there wasn't any one box set that got me through. A friend texted to remind me, 'One day at a time,' and I thought, 'Are you joking? It's more like an hour at a time. Or ten minutes."

More profoundly, what did get him through was the work of the doctors and nurses "all on the NHS", a team he's quick to praise. "This is a challenging time for everyone, politically, socially, environmentally, the general state of the world. But what I've seen over the past year and a half is kindness, compassion, the absolute wonder of human beings at their very best. And that has been my comfort blanket."

Now his treatment has segued into the routine of scans and checks familiar to so many cancer patients, Gilbert has made some concessions to getting fitter - "funnily enough, before my diagnosis, one of the things I was discussing [as a Velindre Centre patron] was joining a campaign to encourage patients to do exercise, because it will help them" - but, for the most part, he's relishing life going back to normal. "I wish I could say I've given up drinking. I go to the gym a bit more, but I've broadly returned to the lifestyle I had before, and I'm thrilled about it. I've had a big party here this

CANCER AND HPV

Around 12,800 cases of neck and head cancer are newly diagnosed in the UK each year. Treatment includes surgery to remove tumours, chemotherapy and radiotherapy.

A growing percentage of head and neck cancer cases, including 70% of pharyngeal cancer, is caused by HPV infection. HPV also causes other types of cancer, including 99.7% of cervical cancer cases.

WHAT IS HPV?

The human papillomavirus (HPV) is a virus transmitted through skin-to-skin contact, usually sexual activity, that infects skin and the lining of cells inside the body. It is estimated that around eight out of ten people will be infected with HPV at some point in their lives, usually without experiencing any symptoms.

There are hundreds of different types of HPV, variously affecting the genitals, mouth and throat, of which around 13 "high risk" types can cause cell changes that, left untreated, may develop into cancer.

Having HPV doesn't mean that someone will definitely get cancer, and spreading the virus does not mean passing on cancer.

PREVENTION

Ways of reducing the risk of HPV include: receiving the HPV vaccine, stopping smoking, using condoms and participating in the national cervical screening programme. Anybody noticing unusual and persistent changes shouldn't wait for a screening appointment and should talk to a doctor.

not have changed, but life has, and he turns reflective. He and his wife are freshly set on having a family (he made a BBC documentary in 2021 about infertility). "It's been a long process for us, and we are still very open to all the many and varied means of being parents. It's completely focused the mind."

He pauses. "I'm not sorry I've had cancer." For the first time in our long conversation, he loses his composure. "It's an odd thing to say, and I feel terrible for my wife. But I feel I can help other people, being there for friends, holding other people's hands. I think this documentary can help a lot of other people, and I like having a sense of purpose. I've seen for myself how important bringing more to the table is. All I've seen is love and care and kindness, and it makes me more hopeful for humanity.

"It's a cliché, but life now tastes a whole lot sweeter than it did. I don't feel like life has given me lemons, I feel like it's given me a lovely trifle." And we share another smile.

CENTURY QUIZ 1980$

From the UK's first TV breakfast show to the 1,000th TOTP... how well do you recall the 80s?

1 OMNIBUS ON CHUCK JONES 1980 Radio Times didn't just pull any old rabbit out of the hat for the Easter cover – relaxing with a good read was none other than Bugs Bunny. Exclusively drawn for RT by Chuck Jones, Bugs was promoting a BBC1 profile on his famous animator for the art-based documentary series Omnibus. The cover also included some hopping – channel hopping, as the line "I never knew there was so much in it" is a riff on the slogan from ITV's telly guide $TV\ Times$.

Which one of Chuck Jones's other animated characters would often appear at the end of a Looney Tunes cartoon by declaring, "That's all folks!"?

- a Elmer Fudd b Daffy Duck
- c Porky Pig

2 EUROVISION SONG CONTEST 1980

The Hague, Netherlands, played host to the 25th annual Eurovision Song

Contest, hence the singing tulips on the cover. Simultaneously broadcast on BBC1 and Radio 2, Terry Wogan again gave his witty commentary. RT reported on the Song for Europe competition that brought sextet Prima Donna to the contest with Love Enough for Two. It wasn't enough to win and the UK came third out of 19 entries. Second was Germany, but the night belonged to Ireland, as Johnny Logan won with What's Another Year.

Which country has had the most consecutive wins and won the most contests?

- a Ireland b Netherlands
- c United Kingdom

3 THE TWO RONNIES 1980

Messrs Barker and Corbett were back for an eighth series of eight packed programmes. The customary line-up of news, sketches, wordplay speeches, music and rambling monologues attracted around 18.5 million viewers an episode.

In the opening show is one of the duo's classic sketches. Initially, it didn't pass writer David Renwick's standards; thankfully he changed his mind, but which sketch is it? a Dead Parrot Sketch b Mastermind Sketch c Antony & Cleopatra Sketch

4 THE ROYAL WEDDING 1981

On 29 July 1981 at St Paul's Cathedral, the wedding of Prince

Charles and Lady Diana Spencer took place. A worldwide TV audience of 750 million watched what was hailed as "the wedding of the century". Adorning the RT cover was an embroidered design exclusively produced by the Royal School of Needlework. RT's 84-page souvenir issue included a detailed order of service, features on the dress, rings, cake and Diana's family tree, which traced her all the way back to King Charles II.

It was the first royal wedding held at St Paul's Cathedral in 480 years. Why did the couple break from the traditional venue of Westminster Abbey?

- a The Abbey's maximum seating is 2,000
- b It was pre-booked
- c It was being renovated

5 NOT THE NINE O'CLOCK NEWS 1982

Not since Monty Python's Flying Circus had an irreverent sketch show made headlines in British comedy like Not the Nine O'Clock News. Reporting back for the fourth and final run were Rowan Atkinson, Pamela Stephenson, Mel Smith and Griff Rhys Jones, and those six episodes would be their most watched and controversial. The cover was a spoof of a previous RT from 1981 promoting the BBC2 drama serial The Borgias. No doubt the innovative faux "turned page" caused a few embarrassed chuckles at the newsagents.

RadioTimes

What was the show's memorable parody Nice Video, Shame about the Song making humorous comment on?

- a The excessive use of special effects in music videos
- b The high cost of music videos
- c The mismatch between visually appealing videos and poor songs

6 CHILDREN IN NEED 1982

Children all around the UK stood to benefit as BBC television and radio, both national and local, linked up to launch the third annual marathon appeal. RT looked at where some of the money raised the previous year had been spent and heard from disadvantaged children and young people who had greatly benefited from it. Terry Wogan again hosted, supported by many stars including Lulu, Cliff Richard, Petula Clark and star gazer Patrick Moore, who played When the Saints Go Marching In on the xylophone.

In 1985 Pudsey Bear joined as the charity's mascot. In 2009 a shy, rosy-cheeked female bear became his companion. What is her name?

a Mrs Bear b Blush c Soo

7 BREAKFAST TIME 1983

It was the dawn of a new broadcasting era: the UK's first TV breakfast show. The BBC dished theirs up just two weeks before ITV rival TV-am stepped up to the plate. Hosted by Frank Bough, Selina Scott and Nick Ross, the show not only brought the news, sport, weather and travel, but included celebrity interviews, the day's newspapers, human interest stories and astrology. In the exercise segment and on her mission to "Get Britain Fit" was Diana Moran, who in the first show was at Waterloo Station in London, putting commuters through their paces.

Due to the colour of her leotard, what was fitness expert Diana Moran better known as?

a Blue Streak b Green Goddess c Pink Panther

8 LAST OF THE SUMMER WINE 1983

Serving up more beautiful Yorkshire scenery to drink in, the seventh series of Roy Clarke's Last of the Summer Wine was back and in its new regular home of Sunday evenings. Giving us more laughs to savour were the familiar trio of Compo (Bill Owen), Foggy (Brian Wilde) and Clegg (Peter Sallis). RT visited Holmfirth, the old West Yorkshire Pennine town where the exterior scenes are filmed.

There was one aspect of the appearance of Nora Batty (Kathy Staff) that Compo frequently commented on. What was it?

- a Her wrinkled stockings
- b Her cardigan c Her curlers

9 TOP OF THE POPS 1.000th EDITION 1983

After 19 years, TV's longest-running pop show was on song to celebrate its 1,000 edition. The regular Thursday Top of the Pops was extended from 30 to 50 minutes and simultaneously broadcast on both BBC1 and Radio 1, where listeners could enjoy the show for the first time in stereo. DJ and regular presenter John Peel revealed to RT how his attitude towards the programme had improved through the years.

At the top of the UK charts the day the show aired – 5 May – was True, sung by which group?

- a Duran Duran b The Police
- c Spandau Ballet

A new bookazine created by the Radio Times film team

Awards season is already on the horizon, but here at Radio Times we are more interested in our own version – the coveted five-star film rating. Throughout the magazine's history, we have rated films from one star (poor) to five stars (excellent), and now we have compiled some of our favourites, whittling down over 1,000 titles to a glittering 250.

Across 180 pages, you'll find films from all genres, dating from the very beginnings of cinema all the way up to 2023 summer blockbusters.

FEATURES

- 250 film reviews written by RT's team of expert writers
- Suggestions for further viewing, if your appetite has been whetted by a certain film
- Trivia nuggets and behind the scenes information (which actor dined on real bison liver in the name of authenticity, for example!)
- Find out where you can stream or rent these films via a helpful QR code
- The guide is also available to buy at your local WH Smith

RUGBY WORLD CUP FINAL

THE GIFT THAT KEEPS ON GIVING

A talent for winning can be far more important than skill alone, says Simon Barnes

If you want to be a winner, the first thing to do is to be better than the opposition. This is a very sound ploy and most people who play sport will heartily recommend it... but they will also know in their hearts that it isn't always enough.

Take the Rugby World Cup, which reaches the final this weekend after seven weeks of competition. As I write it's most likely to be contested by New Zealand and South Africa, unless England do something unexpected and beat South Africa, or Argentina do something sensational and beat New Zealand.

Whatever happens, it won't be the final that pundits and bookies were predicting when the competition started. The best teams were obviously France and Ireland and, as far as you can assess these things, they still are – at least when it comes to playing rugby.

'Ireland and France were the world's best, but it wasn't enough'

They had the two best defences in the world and the two best attacks. They had the best playmakers in Johnny Sexton and Antoine Dupont – and they had the best trajectories, as both teams seemed to be peaking at precisely the right moment. Neither had won the World Cup before and one of them was surely going to change that. What could possibly go wrong?

Ireland and France were joint-best in the world, but it wasn't enough. They were good at running, passing, kicking, tackling, rolling about on the floor and going through the set pieces that the game loves so much – and yet they lacked one other vital asset.

And that is the talent for winning. South Africa (three World Cup wins) beat France because they were – by the narrowest margin – better at winning. New Zealand (three World Cup wins) beat Ireland because they were, by a slightly wider margin, better at winning.

That's possibly the most important quality in sport, but also the most elusive. Sure, there were some enthralling performances in both those victorious teams. For South Africa it was Cheslin Kolbe who caught the eye, as he scored a wonderful try and also charged down a conversion kick, which is almost unheard of these days. In a game decided by a single point, that was a vital contribution.

s for New Zealand, they don't go in for stars. Their tradition, despite notable exceptions, is for a corporate excellence perhaps best exemplified by Ardie Savea and his appetite for just one more carry. The All Blacks aren't a glamorous lot, but winning isn't necessarily about glamour.

Those who have the gift for winning – something that can come and go in a manner that's frustrating for the possessors – tend to win matches when the opposition is at the same level or even slightly better. This gift is a complex mixture of reputation, tradition, impressing the referee, keeping your nerve, managing the game, mastering gamesmanship and, above all, a sublime belief that you will end up on the right side, as if it was meant to be.

New Zealand and South Africa both possess all of the above. The last World Cup final, in 2019, saw South Africa beat England even though England were quite brilliant in the semis and the more fancied team ahead of the final. England have won the World Cup just once and been runners-up three times. They're better at running-up than winning.

Some teams simply expect to win. For years Germany expected to beat England at football. Real Madrid expect to win everything, just as Australian cricketers did before the sandpaper cheating scandal.

You find the same thing in tennis. Novak Djokovic has a sense of authority that gives him the edge again and again; Serena Williams once had the same talent to spare.

The reason we love sport is for the romance of the underdog or the appreciation of the sensationally skildly but sometimes the truth is that victory tends to go to the most victorious.

The Rugby World Cup final is on Saturday at 7.00pm (k/o 8pm) ITV1, 7.30pm Radio 5 Live

Each year, thousands of homeowners access the value that has built up in their homes as tax-free cash to help them improve their lifestyle, whether that's enjoying the holiday of a lifetime, making home improvements, or buying a new car.

WHAT IS EQUITY RELEASE?

Equity release has become a popular way to access the wealth tied up in your home to provide greater financial flexibility and stability in retirement, without the need to sell or downsize. It allows you to unlock a percentage of the value of your home without the requirement to make monthly repayments, as the equity released, plus accrued interest, is paid when you die or move into long-term care. The money released is tax free and can be taken as a lump sum or in smaller instalments. Plus, there are plans that may allow you to make voluntary interest payments subject to certain limits. Early repayment charges may apply above a set value. Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage.

SAFEGUARD YOUR LOVED ONES

All equity release plans come with a no negative equity guarantee, which means that your estate will never owe more than your property is worth when it is sold. There are also plans that allow you to safeguard a percentage of your property value so that you can still pass on an inheritance to vour loved ones.

GET EXPERT ADVICE

We're pleased to be working with Age Partnership+, who are part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*, to offer an equity release service. Through our service, your dedicated adviser can provide you with a personalised illustration so you can understand the features and risks and find out how much you could release. They will help you understand if equity release could be right for you and they will tell you everything you need to know, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

Equity release may involve a home revision plan or lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care. Your quotation is free and you are under no obligation to proceed. Only if you choose to proceed and your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable. Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

IS SHARING REALLY CARING?

Celebrities opening up about illness are self-serving, or so I thought...

This week sees Welsh comedian Rhod Gilbert join those celebrities sharing their experience of serious illness through the prism of primetime TV. As he told me in his interview with RT (see page 22), his hope is that "this documentary can help a lot of other people".

And, admirably honest in an era of virtuesignalling, he added that making it "was partly for me. I'd cancelled all my TV work and tours... I thought, 'It will give me something to do.'"

There we have it, with Gilbert highlighting the different motivations at play in this mushrooming phenomenon of celebrities opening their clinic doors and having TV cameras follow them into the hospital corridors, the doctor's consulting room, or even the operating theatre.

It's undoubtedly gut-wrenching stuff, but I've always had my reservations about these kinds of TV programmes, wondering how many people they're actually helping, or if they're self-promoting exercises in the guise of altruism.

There's clearly a multitude of winners to benefit from such a project making it to screen. The celebrity involved gets exactly what Gilbert describes: attention, a sense of purpose, a bit of work during a lean period. The broadcaster gets a show full of emotion and a human "journey" of which X Factor contestants would be proud. It's a PR win for the beleaguered NHS, its staff caught on camera at their tireless, dedicated best. And, potentially, for viewers, it's an opportunity to be informed, and even inspired to go and get checked out for symptoms.

However, I've never found them entirely authentic, as I'm suspicious that having cameras in the room means everyone involved is on their best behaviour – friends being supportive, nursing staff being polite, hospitals boasting resources, all of which may run counter to viewers' own experiences. Worse, I worry that, with such a genre in vogue, it fosters a TV climate in which every medical condition needs a celebrity to accompany it, without which it will go ignored and under-funded.

Rhod Gilbert (above),

Sarah Beeny and

Bill Turnbull spoke

candidly about their cancer diagnoses

Like every other system run by humans for humans, the popularity of such diaries of disease means they are susceptible to exploitation. Australian "influencer" Belle Gibson falsely claimed to have been diagnosed with multiple cancers to gain lucrative status as a wellness guru. Closer to home, Megan Bhari faked a terminal brain tumour and went to Disneyland on a trip funded by well-wishers. Such duplicity is rare, but it highlights the potency of such an enterprise.

So these were my reservations – and then, last year, I became unwell myself. Suddenly, presenter Sarah Beeny, in explaining her decision to shave off her hair ahead of treatment, articulated everything I felt but couldn't express.

HE SIGHT OF someone vulnerable tugs at something profound within us; when that person has important information to communicate about their experience, it can stop us in our tracks. When that individual is familiar and beloved to us, it makes for revelatory broadcasting. I know other people who hung onto every word of George Alagiah's bowel cancer podcast, while fans of BBC Breakfast's Bill Turnbull cheered him on as he explored alternative treatments for his prostate cancer, and others were inspired by the attitude of "Bowelbabe" Dame Deborah James. Jade Goody's decision to publicise her cervical cancer led to a surge in screenings for young women. All four were communicators, and they had something important to communicate.

'I had reservations that they are self-promoting exercises in the guise of altruism'

Our grief for these people, despite them being strangers to almost all of us, is the price we pay for the connection we felt with them. If, along the way, they moved us, informed us and potentially saved lives, then ultimately it doesn't matter if any of them were just glad to have something to do. Whether deliberately or not, they have all touched the core of what it means to be human.

Rhod Gilbert: a Pain in the Neck for SU2C is on Monday at 9pm on C4. See interview page 22

RELIGION Mysteries of the Faith

All 4 episodes available Wednesday

The Catholic Church loves a holy relic. This four-part documentary series gains access to hallowed sites across the world, to look at or go on the hunt for some of the faith's most sought-after treasures, from the Crown of Thorns to the Holy Grail. Do they really have the power to create miracles? As it looks at the powerful emotional effect the chattels of Christianity can have on believers, the series also explores the ability of faith itself to transport and inspire the faithful. JS

DRAMA

Wolf ★★★ I Available now

George MacKay (1917) stars as a young man who believes he's a wolf in this fitfully interesting psychological drama. Taken to a specialist institution, he meets others who have "Species Identity Disorder", and sparks fly when he gets together with Lily-Rose Depp's "Wildcat". Paddy Considine co-stars as the facility's therapist, whose cure for his patients is confrontational and brutal. Writer/director Nathalie Biancheri's film lacks the black humour of Yorgos Lanthimos's like-minded The Lobster, but it's given a lift by MacKay's physically and emotionally dexterous performance. JAMES MOTTRAM

HORROR Evil Dead Rise

★★★★ 18 Available now

The fifth Evil Dead in the franchise updates the cabin-inthe-woods format by relocating the action to a ramshackle apartment in Los Angeles, where single mum Ellie (Alyssa Sutherland) lives with her three children. After her estranged sister Beth (Lily Sullivan) shows up, an earthquake uncovers the Book of the Dead, and the parasitic demons known as Deadites are unleashed once more, with Ellie herself becoming possessed. This relentless bloodbath is watch-through-yourfingers horror at its finest, to satisfy both long-term fans and those new to the series. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

DRAMA My Friend Dahmer ★★★★ ⑮

Available now

Jeffrey Dahmer is one of the most notorious serial killers in modern history. According to the people who knew him. Dahmer's issues began when he was a teenager, and this absorbing, 1970s-set drama focuses on his final year of high school. Ross Lynch is genuinely unnerving in the lead. but he also ensures that we feel sympathy for Dahmer. His nuanced performance is crucial to the success of a film that gets under your skin and stays there.

STEPHEN CARTY

HORROR Talk to Me

★★★★ 15 Available 26 October

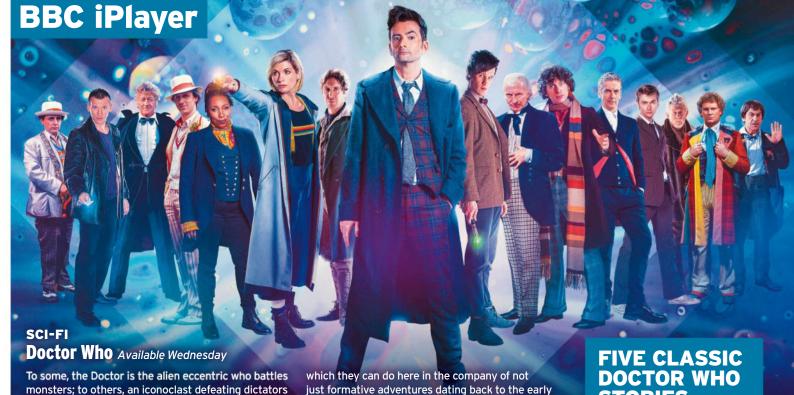

This effective supernatural chiller from Australia sees a group of teens get hold of an embalmed hand with the power to invite possession by the dead. Mia (an engaging Sophie Wilde) takes a turn with the macabre appendage at a party – and begins seeing her recently deceased mother. It's basically Flatliners meets The Monkey's Paw, but co-directors Danny and Michael Philippou manage to put a fresh spin on the concept of trauma allowing otherworldly forces to take control of the living, making this a treat for fans of the genre. ALAN JONES

The Conjuring: the Devil Made Me Do It

★★★ I5 Available now

The eighth entry in the Conjuring universe largely refreshes an otherwise flagging franchise. Director Michael Chaves's true-crime-slanted chiller reunites us with Ed and Lorraine Warren (Patrick Wilson and Vera Farmiga), whose demon-busting skills are tested when they try to acquit a young tree doctor of murder. Their grounds? Demonic possession. The set pieces are increasingly overwrought, but Wilson and Farmiga's chemistry shines through amid the thudding scares, giving us characters to care about. KEVIN HARLEY across the universe. But there's no denying the fact that the heroic Time Lord is one of television's great survivors, proof of that statement being an archive of classic stories that have now joined the post-2005 revival on BBC iPlayer.

It's a terrific present to fans old and new looking to celebrate Doctor Who's upcoming 60th anniversary, years (though not the first serial An Unearthly Child, owing to a rights issue), but also spin-offs including The Sarah Jane Adventures and a curated selection of documentaries. And, in something of a first, each episode will be made as accessible as possible, with subtitles, audio description and signing.

DAVID BROWN

FILM Horror on iPlayer

Available now

The excuse to watch a scary movie is Halloween's biggest perk, and there's no shortage of classics currently on iPlayer. Perhaps the most unsettling is Stanley Kubrick's The Shining. with Jack Nicholson (right) a little too convincing as the frustrated author who descends into murderous madness. Jordan Peele's Get Out and its even creepier follow-up, Us, fly the flag for modern fare, while vintage Val Lewton titles Cat People and Curse of the Cat People, plus 70s favourite Don't Look Now, offer more delicate shivers. CALUM BAKER

DRAMA Boiling Point

All 4 episodes available now

Only superficially similar to the hugely acclaimed Disney+ drama The Bear - they're both set in chaotic kitchens and can both be almost unbearably intense, but have different dramatic intentions - this series follows on from the 2021 film starring Stephen Graham. We're now in a kitchen run by Carly (Vinette Robinson), for whom a day at work is a juggling act that's only partly concerned with making great food. As the series develops, her team's hidden troubles spill out to create a rounded drama - but one that's still capable of maintaining extraordinary tension. JACK SEALE

DOCTOR WHO STORIES

The Dalek Invasion of Earth

William Hartnell, 1964 Daleks patrol London landmarks as Earth in the 22nd century gets occupied by the Doctor's most famous foe.

The Tomb of the Cybermen

Patrick Troughton, 1967 Many Troughton-era serials are incomplete due to episodes being wiped, but this thrilling four-parter about Cybermen frozen on the planet Telos can be watched in its entirety.

The Dæmons

Jon Pertwee, 1971 The third Doctor battles the Master (Roger Delgado) and the ancient Azal.

Pyramids of Mars Tom Baker, 1975

The much-loved pairing of Baker and Elisabeth Sladen star in an atmospheric tale of evil rooted in Egyptology.

The Caves of Androzani

Peter Davison, 1984 Davison's final (and arguably finest) regular outing sees him battle to save a poisoned Peri (Nicola Bryant). DB

The Simpsons Series 34 available Wednesday
The last time anyone got excited about a new run of The Simpsons was at least two decades ago, but when

HORROR

No One Will Save You

Available now

Writer/director Brian Duffield's thriller is a suspenseful cat-and-mouse movie with an extraterrestrial twist. Kaitlyn Dever plays a young woman living alone in a large family house, ostracised by her neighbours. As she wrestles with feelings of guilt and grief, a nasty grey alien invades her home - and a territorial tussle begins. There are echoes of A Quiet Place, Signs and Invasion of the Body Snatchers, but Duffield's largely dialogue-free chiller smartly refreshes genre clichés, while Dever rises to each challenge with gusto. KEVIN HARLEY

HORROR

The Boogeyman ★★★ 🗉

Available now

A monster preys on children in this slick creature feature based on a Stephen King short story. When young Sawyer (Vivien Lyra Blair) is targeted by a "boogeyman" that only emerges at night, her older sister Sadie (Yellowjackets' Sophie Thatcher) is forced to battle the fiend, which their therapist father (Chris Messina) has dismissed as a figment of Sawyer's imagination. British director Rob Savage rustles up some effective scares, although the biggest puzzle is why no one has a torch to deter a being that thrives in the shadows. JEREMY ASPINALL

DOCUMENTARYThe Murder of Grace Millane

Available now

True-crime docs often nauseate with tawdry reconstructions and ghoulish close-ups. But this admirably restrained account lets CCTV footage of British backpacker Grace Millane and her murderer Jesse Shane Kempson speak for itself. There was, after all, plenty of it on the night of her killing in Auckland in 2018. Recordings refuted Kempson's version of events, but his "rough sex" defence in court still led to ugly victim-blaming for a family already shattered by grief. DAVID BROWN

HORROR The Pope's Exorcist ★★ 🖾

Available now

Russell Crowe leads this daft demon-possession movie, which is hugely indebted to The Exorcist. Crowe plays Father Gabriel Amorth, a Vatican exorcist sent to help a boy controlled by a demon. The possession, it transpires, is a lure to trap Amorth. The plot is overly familiar and Ralph Ineson's demon does little more than growl clichés. While the film forgets to shock us, Crowe's prestige is undeniable, and he has great fun as the coffeechugging priest. JAYNE NELSON

HORROR Infinity Pool

Available from Sunday

Combining an intriguing sci-ficoncept with a splattering of body horror, Brandon Cronenberg's follow-up to Possessor is once again indebted to the work of his father, David (Videodrome). Alexander Skarsgard stars as an unsuccessful writer visiting a luxury resort, where he is drawn to a mysterious woman (Mia Goth). The film makes for uneasy viewing at times, but poses interesting questions about the darker side of the human psyche.

PATRICK CREMONA

ACTION Retribution ★★ 四 Available from 27 October

In another of his later-career action roles, Liam Neeson stars as financier Matt Turner, who lives in Berlin with his bored wife (Embeth Davidtz) and their two grumpy kids (Jack Champion and Lilly Aspell). On the school run one morning, Turner receives a call telling him that there's a bomb in the car, and he must obey the blackmailer's instructions if he wants to keep his kids alive. Sadly, what follows is a predictable reprise of films like Speed or Phone Booth, and Turner's move from disengaged father to have-a-go hero fails to convince.

Slasher horror meets time travel in this frothy high-school thriller. When the "Sweet Sixteen Killer" returns 35 years after vanishing, teenager Jamie (Kiernan Shipka) finds herself propelled back to 1987, during his original reign of terror. Befriending her own mother, Jamie must try to prevent her from being murdered. There's a lot to enjoy, including some wry cultureclash gags. Tonally, the film never quite gels, but it's held together nicely by a spirited lead performance from Shipka. DAVE GOLDER

ACTION Plane  恒

Available from 27 October

Gerard Butler and Mike Colter make for an engaging double act in this suspenseful action thriller. Butler plays a pilot forced to make an emergency landing on a war-torn Filipino island. When he and his passengers come under fire from local gang members, Butler's only option is to team up with accused murderer (Colter), on the flight in FBI custody. The two leads enliven proceedings with their winning dynamic, as well as their differing approaches to resolving the situation. PATRICK CREMONA

DOCUMENTARY Unexplained: Caught on Camera

Series 4 episode 1 available Friday

This jolly quasi-documentary doesn't just re-broadcast viral smartphone footage of alleged supernatural phenomena. It convenes a panel of excited expert investigators to react to the footage and then tracks down the people who filmed the images and lands exclusive interviews. It's energetically presented; perhaps you can gain a measure of how seriously to take it by the fact that episode one contains a lengthy investigation into a glass falling off a pub table in Nuneaton. The fifth instalment in the Insidious franchise is a direct seguel to 2013's Chapter 2 (showing this week on Great Movies, see p85). Patrick Wilson returns as Josh Lambert, once tormented in the supernatural realm "the Further". Nine years on, life with his son (Tv Simpkins) is strained; after driving him to college, both suffer haunting visions. Making his directorial debut, Wilson helms some scary moments, but the final act is disappointingly fright-free. JAMES MOTTRAM

Survivor 8.25pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Moody music plays as shadowy figures are about to begin "an intense game of trust and betrayal". This reboot of Survivor, a reality show that first aired on ITV in 2001, has taken a slice of The Traitors' vibe. Can it be just as successful? Based on tonight's launch episode, it has a sporting chance. Split into two tribes, contestants must compete in tasks of mental and physical strength to win supplies, win immunity and win over their fellow castaways.

Food runs short, tensions simmer and a game that involves standing still and holding onto a hoop attached to a heavy barrel for over 40 minutes becomes gripping television. Joel Dommett hosts (he's looser than on The Masked Singer, even if his commentary of the challenges can sound like he's reading Audio Description) and hopefuls include semi-pro footballer Hannah, surf school owner Pegleg (an amputee who's changed his name by deed poll) and pensions manager Richard. And after just one night on the beach, one contestant says: "I knew it was going to be hard, obviously. But I never thought it was going to be like this."

Strictly Come Dancing

6.40pm BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

Halloween is a time for unexplained events, strange goings on and most of all, curses. Strictly has all three of these in spades.

There was a time when pros and celebrities would do all they could to ward off whispers of the "Strictly curse". That doesn't seem to be quite the case this series. In recent weeks, numerous routines have involved choreography with a suggestive head clutch or a close nose-to-nose moment that could look like more if you hit pause at the right frame.

Are these moves essential to the story of the dance? Or a deliberate, titillating move to get tongues wagging? That's one mystery that's unlikely to be solved, especially in Halloween Week. FT

Rugby Union World Cup Final

7.00pm (kick-off 8.00pm) ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

An old adage in sport says that finals never quite do justice to the excitement that precedes them, and that semi- or quarter-finals are more thrilling encounters. Ahead of tonight's rugby final at the Stade de France – and with RT going to press when the teams are yet to be determined - the quality of the lasteight fixtures means this cliché looms large. However, even if tonight's 80 minutes are not the most box-office, they will be the most important.

With only 11 tries in finals this century – and five of those in 2015's showpiece - history forecasts a tense affair most likely to be won with the boot. MAX COPEMAN Sport: p27 from 8.25pm BBC2 Also iPlayer She sang to Sidney Poitier in To Sir with Love, married a Bee Gee, won Eurovision and turned "Well" into the longest word in the language. But what might be forgotten is that for seven years the feisty Scot had her own BBC1 show, and tonight's tribute starts with Lulu at the BBC, a compilation of hits including, of course, Shout (an Isley Brothers song), Bowie's The Man Who Sold the World (a ripping cover with Bowie on sax and backing vocals) and Relight My Fire with Take That.

MUSIC Lulu Night

At 8.25pm, It's Lulu is a profile from 1999 of her life and career, with contributions from Maurice Gibb, Dawn French and Jennifer Saunders.

She also appears at the Blazers Club at 11pm and on Sounds of the Sixties at 11.30pm. MARK BRAXTON

DRAMA Dark Hearts

9.00pm, 9.55pm BBC4 Full series via iPlayer now

A bomb in a marketplace is an early shock as a new double bill of episodes sees this sinewy French drama continue to follow the exploits of a special forces team hunting for jihadist terrorists in Iraq in 2016. There is, of course, worse to come. A new lead suggests that a doctor who left an NGO abruptly two years ago may warrant further investigation, while intelligence from a woman, who has escaped from Isis, causes the team to visit a remote hideout. Their trademark drone reconnaissance offers a confusing picture - when they go there in person, every set of skills they have is soon tested as another of this show's masterfully choreographed, bitingly tense set pieces plays out. DOCUMENTARY Stephen King on Screen

9.00pm Skv Arts Catch up via Now

From moments in Carrie to The Shining, most horror fans will be able to cite a sequence from a Stephen King adaptation that has had a powerful effect on them, For me, it's the vampiric Ralphie Glick scratching at the window in Salem's Lot – just thinking about it gives me the shivers.

And, yet, despite the success of many of these book-to-screen translations, King has been known to object to the liberties taken by directors. Here, some of those behind the camera discuss the film-making process, the creative decisions that were made and the shooting of their famous scenes of fright. DAVID BROWN

MUSIC

Later... with Jools Holland

10.15pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer Bob Dylan songs have been covered so often that the challenge lies in making yours stand out, but that's exactly what Cat Power achieves in tonight's show (which we mistakenly listed in last week's RT). Power's spare version of Mr Tambourine Man is part of a wider Dylan project that she has embarked on, and it's fascinating to hear her discuss it with Holland. There are a couple of fretful numbers from The Streets (Mike Skinner), who sits down to talk about the anxieties of film-making, while Romy (formerly of "The xx") provides plangent electronica, Alison Russell adds a touch of disco, and BC Camplight gives us the more muscular end of indie. SIMON O'HAGAN

DRAMA

The Hollow Crown: Henry V

10.50pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer We few, we happy few, who have followed repeats of the Shakespearian saga enjoy its conclusion tonight. Tom Hiddleston's Hal has now become an angst-ridden Henry V, wrestling with his role as a warrior-king.

BBC adaptations often use a degree of artful cut-and-paste of the texts to streamline the narrative. Here, the focus is less on the soldiers and more on their king, whose funeral is used as a framing device for the story.

Fans of the late Paul Ritter will enjoy his return as sometime blustering coward, Pistol. But it's John Hurt's unmistakeable voice we hear declaim the opening chorus – "O for a muse of fire that would ascend the brightest heaven of invention..." DAVID BUTCHER

Novelist Nadifa Mohamed probes a forgotten byway of showbusiness, the use of colonised people as exhibits in shows and spectacles. A clip from the 1958 Brussels World Fair shows a bemused black child on display in a make-believe African village, surrounded by onlookers.

Mohamed finds more examples from the Victorian era, such as the Zulu miners brought over from South Africa to cosplay as Matabele warriors, re-enacting their defeat by the British army. One of the troupe was a real Matabele prince and his story – he ended his days as a coal miner in Salford – is extraordinary.

Then there's the group of Bambuti (pygmy) people who were Edwardian music hall curiosities. Mohamed is disturbed by what she finds, not least the way the subjects were used in specious racial science. DBu See Nadia Mohamed's Viewpoint: p11

The Final
After seven weeks of tough competition, two teams battle it out for the Webb Ellis Cup at the Stade de France in Paris (kick-off 8.00).

The semi-finals saw two huge clashes between Argentina and New Zealand, and England against the defending champions South Africa. Jacques Nienaber's Springboks will fancy their chances of a second successive title following their 28–29 quarter-final victory over the tournament hosts, France. However, they took on the last-four's only undefeated side in England who appeared to gain momentum as the weeks progressed – despite entering the competition with rock-bottom expectations. Argentina were looking for their first ever appearance in the final but faced stiff opposition against the All Blacks, winners of the famous trophy on three occasions. See p38. ● ● Harry Potter and the Chamber of OF THE Secrets  3.40-6.35pm ITV1 PG

FANTASY The second in the Potter franchise is the one with Tom Riddle's diary, a flying car, a forest filled with giant spiders, plus the terrifying Basilisk. We're also introduced to house elf Dobby (voiced by Toby Jones) and the preening Gilderoy Lockheart (Kenneth Branagh), the newly appointed Defence Against the Dark Arts master at Hogwarts, Harry (Daniel Radcliffe), Ron (Rupert Grint) and Hermione (Emma Watson) also still come across like kids rather than young adults, which can't last. ANDREW COLLINS (US/UK/Ger 2002, may be edited for content, col/sepia, HD)

Playing with Fire ★★ 12.15-2.10pm C4

COMEDY Former wrestler John Cena grapples gamely with this harmless movie about a bunch of California firefighters forced to babysit three cutely obnoxious kids after they are rescued from a burning cabin. Predictable kiddie chaos ensues, along with some ripe pantomime acting, but younger viewers will enjoy the nonsense. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2019, HD)

Designing Woman ★★★★ 1.20-3.15pm BBC2

(not in Wales)

ROMCOM It's a rare showing today for Vincente Minnelli's classy romantic comedy, in which a fashion designer and a crusading sports columnist discover how little they have in common after a whirlwind romance, Lauren Bacall is well cast, but her co-star Gregory Peck slightly lacks the lightness of touch required. George Wells won an Oscar for his witty screenplay. TONY SLOMAN (US 1957, HD)

Beetle Juice ★★★★ 3.30-5.25pm C5

COMEDY Tim Burton's barmy fantasy follows newly expired Alec Baldwin and Geena Davis as they try to rid their home of human pests - though quirky exorcist

Michael Keaton only causes more trouble. Burton made his name with this inventive movie, which brims with zany special effects and ghoulish gags. A belated sequel is in the works and set for release next year. ALAN JONES (US 1988, edited for language, HD)

Ocean's 8 ★★★

5.25-7.25pm C5

CAPER A gang of thieves targets New York's Met Gala in this entertaining all-female spin-off from the Ocean's trilogy. The heist is both ingenious and preposterous, but the film's main draw is its fabulous cast, with Sandra Bullock, Cate Blanchett, Anne Hathaway, Rihanna, Helena Bonham Carter and Awkwafina all rising to the occasion. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2017, edited for content, HD)

Gravity ******

7.00-8.25pm BBC2

THRILLER Director Alfonso Cuarón's Oscar-winning sci-fi spectacular stars Sandra Bullock and George Clooney as astronauts left marooned in space after their shuttle is destroyed. The special effects are stunning, and Bullock's performance imbues the film with a humanity and grace that beautifully complements Cuarón's vision. DAMON WISE (US/UK 2013, edited for language, HD)

Pitt and Jason Patric playing two of the grown-up abused children. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1996, violence, swearing)

Man on Fire ★★★ 10.25pm-1.05am C4

THRILLER In director Tony Scott's movie, burnt-out former US agent Denzel Washington plays bodyquard to a wealthy couple's child (Dakota Fanning) during a wave of kidnappings in Mexico City. The second half showcases some imaginative ultra-violence, though Scott's overreliance on gimmicky visuals occasionally proves distracting. GARETH MOSES (US/UK 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

■ Escape Room ★★★ 11.30pm-1.05am BST (starts

12.30am in Scotland) BBC1 15

HORROR This taut thriller sees six strangers (including Logan Miller and Taylor Russell) brought together for what they assume will be a run-of-the-mill role-playing adventure, only to find their lives in jeopardy. It's hardly the most original premise, but the movie is packed with nerve-tingling incident and is directed at a breakneck pace by Adam Robitel. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2019, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

ENTERTAINMENT Mamma Mia! I Have a Dream

6.15pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX
Perhaps ITV doesn't want to overlap too much with the Strictly results over on BBC1, but this all-singing search to find two new stars for Mamma Mia!'s West End production deserves a more primetime slot.
Yes, it's cheesy, but it's super fun, too.

This week, the spotlight is on the girls. There's an acting workshop where they must each re-create one of the film's classic scenes, before the seven Sophies perform a song solo to impress the judges. A few of them even bring host Zoe Ball to tears with their powerful renditions; however, for some the nerves creep in. By the time someone gets sent home, you can't help but really feel for them. FT

NATURE Planet Earth III

6.20pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer The first episode was good, but this second is on another level. We're visiting the world's oceans, where the magical and nightmarish merge and we meet creatures that may elicit the odd involuntary "Whaaat?" as you watch.

We only see the glass squid briefly, but it is exquisitely strange and beautiful, as is the siphonophore – a sort of deep-sea washing line up to 45m long (the longest creature known, apparently).

Nearer the surface, but no less bizarre, is the clown frogfish, who lurks in kelp forests. It uses a fishing rod to lure its prey, then pounces with a gulp and (perhaps enhanced by the sound editors) a resultant little burp. It's a programme full of wonders. DAVID BUTCHER

TRAVEL Eva Longoria: Searching for Mexico

7.20pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer "I'm always hungry," confides actor Eva Longoria as she happily explores the history, culture and food of Veracruz. It's true she eats everything with gusto and happily chops and stirs alongside native cooks, but I wonder how much cooking she does herself.

Perhaps that doesn't matter.
This series isn't a demonstration of Mexican recipes so much as giving us a flavour of the country's traditional and varied cuisine. "We eat badass food," one local chef tells her and that could be chicken marinated in vanilla, ceviche combined with frijoles and a stew including coffee flowers.

You won't find chilli con carne and nachos on this menu.

JANE RACKHAM

DRAMA Three Little Birds

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX The thing about stories of triumph over adversity is that there's often a lot of suffering before we get to the celebration. And this second episode of Lenny Henry's vivid, 1950s-set drama is all about those hard knocks, from the women of Dudley brandishing their washing baskets like shields when they encounter the newly arrived Leah and Hosanna, to the Teddy Boys yelling "get back to Africa" at every opportunity. Soon enough, verbal abuse escalates to physical violence as a night at the local pub takes an incendiary turn.

Chantrelle, meanwhile, is being worked to the bone by Diana, the mother of the house, while patriarch Ernest (Arthur Darvill playing against type and leaving a trail of slime) makes sleazy advances. DAVID BROWN

DOCUMENTARY

The Devil's Confession: the Lost Eichmann Tapes

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer The concluding part of this is more emotionally loaded than the first. As before, we see colourised footage from the trial of Nazi logistics boss Adolf Eichmann (in 1961), denying his involvement in the Holocaust, set against recordings made in Argentina recalling his crimes with pride (1957).

We learn of Eichmann's chilling zeal in pursuing the Final Solution, deporting 400,000 Jews from Hungary in 1944 and going behind Himmler's back to send more. When the film cuts from survivors giving testimony at the trial to the same people interviewed today, it's a powerful statement. DBu

DRAMA Six Four

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX
This British crime thriller is so full of dead ends, it's like trying to find your way through a complicated maze.
Every turn you take, there's a blank wall. Another young woman has been kidnapped, but we don't know why or by whom; we've got no clues about Michelle/Sarah's former secret life as she skulks around a posh area of London; police records on the Julie Mackie case have disappeared or are inaccessible; and absolutely nobody seems to know what Six Four is.

Thankfully, we finally get some answers – and a surprise, too, when Michelle/Sarah confronts the mysterious Piers, despite the ominous warning that nobody will help her if it all goes wrong. JR

REALITY

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4Catch up via C4 streaming
We're down to six recruits who are all in pain (their blistered feet are an especially repulsive sight), but who are about to be tested for their survival instinct. The DS's assessment of their progress is interesting. Who do you think Foxy is talking about when he says, "His arrogance rubs me up the wrong way... he's shown grit, but I don't know that I trust him"?

This week's main challenge is horrible, replicating the terrifying reality of jungle combat... and interrogation. There's some choice language involved in that which some viewers might wish they'd said to a certain recruit. JR

THEATRE

As You Like It/ Shakespeare Sonnets: a Modern Love Story

9.00pm/8.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Is Shakespeare still relevant? It's a question Helen Mirren addresses (along with the Bard's "horribly underwritten" women) in an enlightening introduction at 8.45pm. Her performance as Rosalind in Basil Coleman's 1978 take on As You Like It is one of her earliest screen roles, in a witty and imaginative production.

Earlier, the BBC's latest attempt to assert Shakespeare's currency, Modern Love Story at 8pm, is a mostly successful knitting together of 20 sonnets to depict four modern romances. Smartly starting with a big hitter (Shall I Compare Thee to a Summer's Day?) as Eloka Ivo falls swooningly in love, it moves vividly through fallings out and break-ups, with Rose Ayling-Ellis signing sonnets with increasing desperation as her relationship collapses. ADVENTURE Offering a rich tapestry of Mexican folklore, family heritage and charming creepiness, this mariachi musical marvel finds Pixar at the top of its animation game. Banned from becoming a musician by his family, young Miguel (voiced by Anthony Gonzalez) steals a sacred guitar from a crypt and enters the Land of the Dead. Kids will adore the psychedelic spirit creatures, candy-coloured chihuahuas and other spectral delights, while there are more sophisticated gags relating to artist Frida Kahlo and the Santo wrestling genre for the grown-ups. ALAN JONES (US 2017, HD)

Hotel Transylvania 2 8 ***

1.05-2.50pm C4

COMEDY This seguel to the hit animated ahoul-fest reioins Count Dracula (voiced by Adam Sandler) as he tries to prove his half-human grandson is a vampire at heart. The film is little more than an excuse for a whole lot of slapstick, but the gags do at least come thick and fast. Followed by the third in the series. A Monster Vacation. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US 2015 HD)

The Train $\star\star\star\star$

2.10-4.20pm BBC2 (starts 1.50pm in Wales)

WAR Burt Lancaster is superb here as the heroic railwayman attempting to stop demented Nazi officer Paul Scofield from pillaging art treasures from France in the dying days of the Second World War. John Frankenheimer provides the technically flawless direction and the French locations are well used. TONY SLOMAN (Fr/It/US 1964, some violence, BW, HD)

Mrs Miracle 2: Miracle in Manhattan ★★

3.00-4.55pm C5

FANTASY Doris Roberts returns as the problem-fixer in this made-for-TV sequel. Working in a New York store in the run-up to Christmas, Mrs Miracle combines magic, meddling and wholesome values to bring cheer to the needy souls who cross her path. Roberts charms whenever she's on screen, but not all the cast share her gentle appeal. SLOAN FREER (Can TVM 2010, HD)

Addams Family Values ★★★★

4.45-6.30pm C4

COMEDY This terrific sequel has an even blacker vein of humour than the 1991 original. Gomez and Morticia (Raul Julia and Anielica Huston) now have a new baby, while Uncle Fester (Christopher Lloyd) has fallen under the spell of a black widow (Joan Cusack). But, once again, it's Christina Ricci who steals the show as the deadpan young Wednesday. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1993, HD)

□ Unhinged ★★ 15 9.00-11.00pm Sky Mix

THRILLER Russell Crowe slums it in this far-fetched road-rage shocker. Stressedout driver Rachel (Caren Pistorius) beeps her horn at a man (Crowe) who's stalled at traffic lights, and then spends the rest of her very bad day being irrationally hounded by him. A few scenes ramp up the suspense, but mostly this is a rather joyless ride. AJ (US 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

HORROR Chucky gets a slick makeover as the gory toy story franchise gets the reboot treatment. This time, a disgruntled sweatshop worker removes the safety protocols from an assembly line doll, making it an evil sociopath. The film strikes exactly the right tone between the comical and the ghoulish, right up to the final megastore massacre, AJ (US 2019, violence, swearing)

CHILLER Writer/director M Night Shyamalan created a modern classic with this intelligent ghost story. Bruce Willis plays the child psychologist attempting to get inside the head of Halev Joel Osment, who claims he can see dead people. Emmerdale

7.30pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX
Rapist Craig is dead and Emmerdale will reveal who is responsible in a week's worth of atypical episodes featuring flashback sequences. But despite this narrative novelty, I have to ask: why has a storyline that could have concerned itself with the court system or low prosecution rates for rape suddenly now been turned into a whodunnit?

Unless, of course, the perpetrator turns out to have been motivated by that very reason and gives an impassioned speech about the slim chance of Craig being sent to prison. Not that vigilantism is the way to go, obviously, but it would at least be true to form in a village where mistrust of the police results in everyone routinely taking the law into their own hands. MasterChef: the Professionals

9.00pm BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

There's an extraordinary range of reactions to this week's skills tests: initial panic, confusion (on the faces of both competitors and judges), "shaking like a rock" nerves and calm, efficient confidence.

Monica Galetti and Marcus
Wareing are amused that parsnips, one of the skills test ingredients, is the star of a dish in the next round too. Gregg Wallace, meanwhile, gasps (well, a sort of wheeze as if he's drawing his last breath) in delight at the prospect of a rich chocolate dessert. There are disappointments though when certain dishes aren't finished in time. "Just a bad day in the kitchen," Marcus concludes.

The Detectives: Taking Down an OCG

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer The opener to this new series of the true-crime documentary strand is not for the squeamish. It all starts when a road rage incident on a Rochdale estate escalates into a full-on brawl. A group of tree surgeons working on the estate then try to intervene and before long a man's hand is almost severed with an axe.

The suspects in this horrific incident turn out to be members of the notorious ADAM OCG (organised crime group), which gives Detective Sergeant Martin Soutter and his specialist team a way to start investigating a gang responsible for everything from drug dealing and money laundering to child grooming. Bringing them to justice, though, won't be easy. CERI THOMAS

The Long Shadow

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX
So entrenched is DCS George Oldfield (David Morrissey) in his view that the "Ripper" recording is genuine that any evidence to the contrary is routinely ignored. Survivor Olive Smelt is adamant that her attacker was from Yorkshire, but that testimony is dismissed because the man on the audio is a Geordie. And even when Bingley-born Peter Sutcliffe (Mark Stobbart) is interviewed and found to have facial features that match a photofit, he too is disregarded because of his accent.

So, there's a horrible sense of grim inevitability to what happens next, as the fears of Doreen Hill (a powerhouse performance from Jill Halfpenny) regarding the safety of her student daughter Jacqueline are borne out. DB

Julian Fellowes's series returns with high-society dilemmas coming thick and fast. Should New York's upper crust stick with their faithful Academy opera house or – whisper it – try the new, gauche Metropolitan? And how will one family weather the scandal when it emerges that their offspring has been secretly... teaching watercolours to young ladies?

It's probably a mark of the great cast (including an acid Christine Baranski) that they manage to make these paper-light storylines engaging, even as the subplots tackle slightly meatier themes. For example, robber baron Mr Russell (Morgan Spector) is taking on the unions at his railroad. HUW FULLERTON

Jeremy Deller: This Cultural Life

10.00pm BBC4

Catch up via iPlayer

Turner Prize-winning artist Jeremy Deller is the master of spectacle. As he discusses with John Wilson, his rich cultural life veers from the Tommy film to artist Francis Bacon, whom Deller met as a schoolboy. To commemorate the centenary of the Battle of the Somme's first day, Deller conceived the living memorial We're Here because We're Here.

As the accompanying documentary (following at 10.30pm and first broadcast in 2016) details, 1600 volunteers dressed as First World War soldiers embedded themselves in 27 busy contemporary towns. The planning was meticulous, the public reaction surprising. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DOCUMENTARY

Scary Tales of New York

10pm Sky History Catch up via Now

That's not scary as in Halloween-spooky, but scary as in true crime: this unusual documentary series recounts stories of real cases that helped to sell thousands of copies of true-crime magazines in New York in the 1930s. Affecting the tone and costume of a reporter from one of those titles, Colm Meaney hosts investigations that use transcripts of real testimony and snatches of archive footage.

First up is a triple homicide over Easter weekend, 1937, which is fodder for the city's fans of sleaze and betrayal: one of the victims is a glamour model whose racy portfolio seems, at first, to offer a clue as to who the killer could be. JACK SEALE

Matt Baker's Travels with Mum and Dad 9.00pm More4 Catch up via C4 streaming

Oh, that Matt Baker's a lovely boy, isn't he? This will no doubt be the consensus opinion of viewers across the land as the Countryfile host takes mum Janice and dad Mike off for a second series of great northern adventures, beginning on Lindisfarne.

It's a trip that requires planning, as the island's unique location a mile off the mainland in the North Sea means that it's cut off at high tide. So, there's a degree of trepidation as the Baker clan hit the causeway in their 4x4 with its attached caravan. But once there, thoughts of getting swallowed by water recede as Lindisfarne Castle gets explored, crab sandwiches are devoured, and the produce is sampled at a distillery. If Matt has a Best Son in the World trophy on a shelf back home, he's certainly now entitled to give it another polish. DB

All Is True ★★★ 11.15pm-12.50am BBC2 (starts 12.15am in N Ireland)

DRAMA William Shakespeare's final years are treated with a mixture of fact and supposition in this modest drama that sees the Bard return to Stratford-upon-Avon after his London theatre burns down. Kenneth Branagh directs and stars (complete with prosthetic nose and wig) as the older Will, with Judi Dench on growling form as his spouse, Anne Hathaway. It's a poignant story, but some stodgy dialogue and an overall lack of punch inhibit its impact. The Beeb's Bard season continues on Wednesday with Shakespeare in Love - see p85. TREVOR JOHNSTON (UK/US 2018, swearing, HD)

The Admirable Crichton ***

11.00am-12.55pm Film4 U

ADVENTURE This is a fine version of JM Barrie's comic play about a butler who takes over as master when an aristocratic family is shipwrecked. Kenneth More's genial urbanity shines through as Crichton, while Diane Cilento and Sally Ann Howes play the women vying for his affections. TOM HUTCHINSON (UK 1957, HD)

Dick Barton Strikes Back ★★★ 4.15-5.45pm

Talking Pictures TV

CRIME The last of three Hammer films based on the BBC radio series, this is a fun exercise in nostalgia. Don Stannard stars as the special agent pursuing a gang that plans to use a super-weapon to rule the world. It's routine B-movie fare, but Stannard exudes suavity as Barton, and is joined by Bruce Walker as his sidekick, Snowey White. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1949, BW)

Big Fish ★★ 6.35-9.00pm Great Movies

FANTASY Albert Finney stars here as a travelling salesman whose ridiculous stories of his exploits have driven a wedge between him and his son, Billy Crudup.

Called to his father's deathbed, Crudup is determined to learn the truth before it's too late. Tim Burton's film drifts colourfully along, but lacks his usual edge. BRIAN PENDREIGH (US 2003, edited for content)

COMEDY Alec Guinness gives one of his best comic performances in this Ealing classic, playing a meek bank clerk who discovers he has a criminal mind. Deciding to steal a million in gold bullion, he enlists the help of Stanley Holloway, Alfie Bass and Sid James, TFB Clarke's impeccable screenplay rightly won an Oscar. DP (UK 1951, BW)

The Hunger Games: Mockingjay Part 1 ★★★★ 8.00-10.15pm Sky Showcase

ACTION Society quivers on the cusp of civil war in the penultimate instalment of the dystopian series. Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) is now the face of a revolution, while Peeta (Josh Hutcherson) is still a pawn of President Snow (Donald Sutherland). This is really a bridging film to the Part 2 finale, but it's crammed with well-drawn characters and intelligent ideas. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2014, violence, HD)

Insidious ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm Great Movies

HORROR James Wan (Saw) directs this competent haunted-house tale. Josh (Patrick Wilson) and Renai (Rose Byrne) are a normal married couple with three kids. When they move into a new house, they are plagued by mysterious scratches. bangs and shifting furniture. Derivative as it is, Insidious has a few genuine scares and the final shock twist is nicely handled. The saga continues tomorrow – see p75. ADAM SMITH (US/Can 2010, violence)

DRAMA This powerful domestic drama stars Kelvin Harrison Jr as a talented wrestler whose future looks uncertain in the wake of an injury. The film's unflinching portrait of a young man on the edge can be agonising to watch, but writer/director Trev Edward Shults paints a convincing picture of what it's like to be a young black man in America today. ES (US 2019, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

The Howling $\star\star\star\star$ 11.10pm-1.00am Legend

HORROR Director Joe Dante and co-writer John Sayles have huge fun turning werewolf clichés on their head in this rare beast of a horror that both gore fans and film buffs can enjoy. The witty plot sees sceptical TV journalist Dee Wallace uncover a werewolf colony that's trying unsuccessfully – to tame its animal instincts. The lupine make-up by Rob Bottin is still amazing. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1981, violence, swearing, nudity)

"Identical" is the key word in this week's signature challenge (to make 12 identical spiced buns). It's almost – but not quite – as if the flavour is less important than a consistent size.

less important than a consistent size Expect lots of gags about buns from Noel Fielding and Alison Hammond.

Last week's star baker is on — ahem — a roll during the signature and technical challenges, but several of the others struggle with the theme of botanicals (one baker even had to look up the word). Making entremets showstoppers also causes a bit of stress, but have you ever seen quite so much love, support, camaraderie and laughter in the tent? JANE RACKHAM

DOCUMENTARY

Simon Reeve's Return to Cornwall

9.00pm (not Wales) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

When Simon Reeve toured postlockdown Cornwall in 2020, he saw a side to the county that visitors usually don't. Returning last winter for this update (first shown in April), he discovered that rising rents and bills meant people were struggling to afford even the basics. It's not the only example of deprivation he found.

Simon always tackles difficult issues with empathy and an open mind so, although he is engaging and witnesses how generous people can be, this is no fluffy celeb travelogue. He's due to travel further afield next year in a new series exploring the planet's wildernesses in some "knackering, emotional and occasionally scary" journeys. JR

Rolf Harris: Hiding in Plain Sight

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX
Angry betrayal was felt when the crimes of Rolf Harris were exposed.
As a nation of viewers, we'd been duped, our memories warped by what was revealed. But this sharp analysis (released earlier this year on ITVX) reminds us of the damage done to his victims during their formative years – as well as the lack of remorse shown by the perpetrator.

It's the story of fame, money and power allowing one man to pass abuse off as eccentric behaviour – even when his crimes were being committed in public view. Be prepared to be left outraged all over again, as first-hand accounts combine with archive footage to tell the story not only of Harris but also those who enabled him. DAVID BROWN

REALITY

The Hotel Inspector

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

Alarm bells ring for Alex Polizzi before she's even walked through the door of the York Hotel in Morecambe. The pub with rooms is even worse inside, because the bedrooms are scruffy, dismal and outdated – it's clear that novice hoteliers Gareth and Gemma have found it hard to transition from their former careers in the military.

It's commendable that they want their prices to be affordable for the community, but Alex reckons they're almost paying customers to eat and drink there. What's needed is a magic wand to turn the place around (she puts it a little more colourfully than that) and a lot of placatory "darlings" from her. It's a huge challenge to make the place pass muster. JR

Jailed: Inside Maghaberry Prison

10.00pm (not NI or Wales) BBC2 Full series on iPlayer now

There's a curious, knockabout tone to this series. Stephen Nolan takes a combative line with prisoners, joshing them, challenging their claims to sympathy, even as the overall picture makes it hard not to feel sympathy for them. There are lighter moments, as when an inmate tells the crew, "I'm in for murdering a cameraman...'

But this episode is the toughest to watch yet, as Nolan gets access to the euphemistically named Care and Supervision Unit, where prisoners are isolated if they assault staff or are a danger to themselves. Interviews are not allowed, but a prisoner's cries echoing down the corridor are haunting enough. DAVID BUTCHER

The Hidden Children of Ruinerwold Farm

10.00pm, 10.45pm BBC4 Full series on iPlayer now

While the feeling of catharsis is clear for the four older children who escaped their father's abuse on a Dutch homestead, the sense of prurience intensifies with a couple of questionable editorial decisions from film-maker Jessica Villerius. As the pre-trial hearing approaches, the quartet re-establish contact off screen with five siblings who cannot or will not acknowledge the horrors of their upbringing. The remarkable optimism, pragmatism, mutual love and support between the older siblings ensure this is never the bleak wallow in human misery it sometimes threatens to become. GT

Radio 1 Live Lounge

10.40pm, 11.05pm (regions vary) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Much rawer and more authentic than Taylor Swift, more instantly relatable than Billie Eilish, 20-yearold American singer/songwriter Olivia Rodrigo is now pop's foremost chronicler of teen woes. You can get a good measure of her oeuvre from this set, which kicks off a month of Live Lounge performances: taking tracks from her new album Guts. Rodrigo treats us to the mischievous boy-trouble anthem Get Him Back! and the furious stream of consciousness that is Vampire, the latter showing off that she can properly sing.

It's followed by a set from rapper Doja Cat, who is also interviewed by Clara Amfo. JACK SEALE murder: the relentless stream of crimes being investigated every day by the Metropolitan Police in this observational documentary series is disturbing to watch. Yet it's hard to turn away from it.

ON THE CASE From left: DCs Sanith Sathiadevan and Robert Newlands, response officers Jay Lelas and Sade Kujore-Taylor DOCUMENTARY and DI Kelly Schonhage The Met 9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer Stabbings, domestic violence, sexual attacks, container on an industrial estate in north-west

Among the cases this time is a search for a missing person. Agnes Akom hasn't been seen for eight days. CCTV footage shows her getting into the car of Neculai Paizan and being driven to a storage

London. They're filmed walking into the container but three hours later he comes out alone.

It may sound like the gruesome plot of many TV crime dramas, but what had happened to Agnes in there is horribly real.

It's also desperately sad that not every missing person case gets a sufficient level of awareness and public attention. JR

FILM REVIEWS

Insidious: Chapter 2 ★★★

9.00-11.10pm Great Movies

HORROR The original Insidious cast and crew return for another spook-house tour, rife with creaking doors, tinkling pianos and jumpy edits. Picking up events from the end of the first film (see review, p65), we find Josh Lambert (Patrick Wilson) returned from "The Further" possessed by the spirit of a serial-killer drag queen dubbed the "Bride in Black". The movie eventually descends into histrionic camp, but there's no denying director James Wan's gift for spectral sleight of hand. If your nerves can stand it, stay tuned for Chapter 3, which follows, ALAN JONES (US 2013, violence, swearing)

Edge of Eternity ★★★ 11.20am-12.55pm

Talking Pictures TV

WESTERN Over a decade before Dirty Harry, director Don Siegel worked wonders with the low budget of this modern-day western, which sees lawman Cornel Wilde and socialite Victoria Shaw pursuing a mystery murderer in the Grand Canyon area. The overall effect is marred only by some cheap back projection that jars against the footage of the real thing. TONY SLOMAN (US 1959)

The Invisible Man Returns ★★★ 12.45-2.20pm Legend

SCI-FI This first seguel to the Claude Rains classic is more modestly scaled than its predecessor, but still receives a first-class treatment from German director Joe May. Vincent Price replaces Rains and gets his first starring role as a man condemned to hang for a murder he didn't commit. Price's rich theatrical voice makes him a credible presence, even when he is invisible, AJ (US 1940, BW)

The Man in the White Suit ***

2.30-4.15pm Film4

COMEDY This was the only Ealing comedy to really bare its teeth. Capitalist greed, unemployment and fear of progress are some of the provocative themes explored in Alexander Mackendrick's razor-sharp satire. Alec Guinness is wonderfully unworldly as the boffin whose indestructible cloth invention unites the textile industry against him. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1951, BW, HD)

Johnny Nobody ★★★ 4.15-6.00pm

Talking Pictures TV DRAMA This twisty but flawed movie is set in Ireland and features an interesting mix of acting talent. William Bendix is the atheist author who tells God to strike him down, before stranger Aldo Ray then shoots him dead, claiming God told him to do it. Urbane British actor Nigel Patrick (The League of Gentlemen) directs and co-stars. A.J (UK 1961 violence BW)

Ghostbusters ★★ 6.20-9.00pm Film4

COMEDY Director Paul Feig's gender-reversed reboot of the beloved 1984 movie is a mess of misfiring humour and chaotic CGI. Melissa McCarthy, Kristen Wiig, Kate McKinnon and Leslie Jones are the spook exterminators who must stop a crazed janitor unleashing mayhem on Manhattan. Sadly, the talented quartet are ill-served by a scattershot script that gets more confusing as it goes on. AJ (US 2016, edited for content, HD)

HORROR It's a timely showing for John Carpenter's classic suburban slasher, in which Jamie Lee Curtis and her friends are targeted by a knife-wielding, mask-wearing stalker, while psychiatrist Donald Pleasence attempts to stop him. The movie's power to grip has never diminished, thanks in part to Carpenter's own pulsating score. AJ (US 1978, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

THRILLER Downton Abbey's Dan Stevens ditched his respectable costume-drama image with this tense thriller. He plays a discharged soldier who turns up at the home of an army friend who was killed in action. The family takes him in, but then the seemingly humble farm boy begins to reveal his sinister side. DAMON WISE (US/UK 2014, violence, swearing, nudity, drug abuse)

Anita & Me ★★★

11.15pm-12.45am BBC2 (not in N Ireland)

COMEDY DRAMA Meera Sval's adaptation of her own novel centres on a Puniabi family living in a Midlands village in the early 1970s. At the heart of the story is teenager Meena (Chandeep Uppal) and her relationship with wayward neighbour Anita (Anna Brewster). The quality cast includes Sanjeev Bhaskar, Lynn Redgrave and Syal herself. JASON CARO from 7.30pm BBC4 Also on iPlayer Celebrations for the Time Lord's 60th birthday have officially started, and these two programmes, presented by high-calibre, lifelong fans, should bring BBC4 its highest ratings in ages. In Talking Doctor Who at 7.30pm, David Tennant (the tenth and current 14th Doctor) is our informed and enthusiastic guide as he time-travels the archives to recount the "classic era" of the first seven incarnations (1963–89).

At 8.30pm, Jo Whiley hosts a fabulous concert (first aired on Radio 2), showcasing Who music across the decades. She meets the composers and a trio of showrunners, and there's a premiere of Murray Gold's revamp of the theme tune and his scores for 15th Doctor Ncuti Gatwa. PATRICK MULKERN See page 32

Nadiya's Simple Spices

8.00pm BBC2

Catch up via iPlayer

"When you start using spices in different ways, you learn to be very creative with them," says Nadiya as she does just that, adding turmeric to the water that she's boiling her potatoes in. I'd never have thought of it myself, but it obviously adds colour and flavour to her Bombay-spiced potatoes. She also, in an unusual move for a chef, is willing to share a secret ingredient that makes a massive difference to the final dish.

Nadiya's making other crowdpleasing dishes, such as keema plate pie, masala-marinated chicken and a coconut bundt cake decorated with edible flowers. It's like last night's Bake Off showstoppers – but even more spectacular. JANE RACKHAM

DNA Family Secrets

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

We've already seen that, despite incredible advances in genetic science, some questions just can't be answered. "It comes completely down to luck as to whether someone is on the DNA database," explains Professor Turi King, presumably anticipating dismay. Tonight's first two cases are especially tricky. Since her mother died shockingly young, Charlotte wants to trace her dad, but has absolutely no clues about his identity; Rogie only recently discovered that during the war her late mother had a baby who was adopted. Meanwhile Lviss is keen to know whether his father was, as he believes, Nigerian. Happily, nobody regrets the process, however frustrating the result. JR

DRAMA Payback

Full series available on ITVX
DCI Guthrie is in an uncompromising mood. Of Lexie's welfare he says,
"We will not do anything that will compromise her safety," having just wildly compromised her safety by installing listening devices in the hotel suite she's sharing with a gangster.

Thankfully, there is someone on the force who has clocked how genuinely vulnerable Lexie is, though DC Jibran Khan is having a busy old time of it with his own duties in this penultimate episode. Not only does he have headphones on to monitor audio from the bugs, but he's also looking at sat-nav info from a car that's being tracked and studying printouts of big cash withdrawals from a dodgy account. And they say guys can't multitask. DB

Roman Kemp: the Fight for Young Lives

9.00pm BBC3

Catch up via iPlayer

Having encouraged members of his generation with mental health troubles to speak out in his 2021 documentary Our Silent Emergency, Roman Kemp now discovers there aren't actually enough professionals out there for them to talk to.

Demand is outstripping supply and enough's enough, argues the broadcaster, who's seen here growing increasingly disillusioned with Government attitudes. Eventually, he takes it upon himself to write an open letter to MPs of every stripe, asking for counsellors to be installed in all schools. The response he receives doesn't exactly fill him with optimism. DB

Dark Winds

9.00pm Alibi Catch up via Now

The relationship between Navajo cops Jim Chee and Bernadette Manuelito was initially rather brittle, but the pair are now warming to each other. Tonight, Chee even confides in his colleague about being shunned at school after his mother was labelled a witch for daring to face down an abusive partner.

In the here and now, though. we learn more about why that mundane painting of a cactus has become highly prized - a storyline that involves a used car dealer known as Devoted Dan. He's portrayed by Rainn Wilson, an actor best known for playing a salesman of a very different nature in his role as Dwight Schrute in the US version of The Office. DB from 10pm BBC4 All on iPlayer Making Out remains a notable entry in the British TV tradition of tacitly political populist dramas about working-class characters facing everyday travails. It's fondly remembered for a reason. Running for three series between 1989 and 1991, the Manchester-based comedy drama revolved around a group of female factory floor workers led by no-nonsense scouser Queenie (Margi Clarke). It was written by Debbie Horsfield, who went on to pen the dramas Cutting It, Age before Beauty and the revived Poldark.

Before the first four episodes are repeated tonight, Margi Clarke fronts a 15-minute introduction to the show, of which all 24 episodes are available on iPlayer. PAUL WHITELAW

ITALIAN JOB Emilia Fox plays an MI6 agent in Umbria

DRAMA

Signora Volpe

9pm Drama Catch up: UKTV Play Opening scenes of Emilia Fox jogging by the Thames could easily have come from Silent Witness, but in this leisurely mystery drama that was first made available on Acorn, she's playing an MI6 officer rather than a forensic pathologist. And pretty soon, intelligence operative Sylvia has exchanged grey old London for the picturesque hillsides of Umbria, Italy, where she's due to attend her niece's wedding.

The problem is that murder is also a guest at the nuptials, which means the resourceful Sylvia must use the tools of her trade to trap a killer. In her arsenal are gadgets that feel as though they originated in Q's lab, including a toothbrush that doubles as a USB stick and lipstick that can scan thumbprints. And rather like 007, Sylvia must blend in to any background, drive fast and shoot straight. Fox, to her credit, makes a good fist of all three tasks. DB

Shakespeare in Love Exercise

10.40pm-12.35am BBC1 (starts 11.40pm in N Ireland and Wales; 12.55am in Scotland)

ROMCOM Taking the Bard's writing of Romeo and Juliet as its inspiration, John Madden's film combines modern humour with its 16th-century setting. Will (Joseph Fiennes) falls for soon-to-be-married Viola (Gwyneth Paltrow) and casts her, disguised as a boy, as his Romeo. As the affair unfolds, so does the play, in a film that is intelligent, passionate and funny by turns. Among the cast, Judi Dench delights with her portrayal of Queen Elizabeth I. Shakespeare's Macbeth gets a retelling tomorrow - see p95. LORIEN HAYNES (US 1998, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

COMEDY This fun spin-off from the kids' sketch show finds an aspiring Iceni warrior (Emilia Jones) and a reluctant Roman soldier (Sebastian Croft) coming of age during Boudicca's rebellion. Terrific songs, including The Battle of Watling Street, illustrate the franchise's gift for blending education with anarchy. EMMA SIMMONDS (UK 2019, violence, HD)

Son of Frankenstein ***

11.00am-1.00pm Legend PG

HORROR The third entry in Universal's classic series marks Boris Karloff's last fling as the Monster. Basil Rathbone (as the Baron), Bela Lugosi (Ygor) and Lionel Atwill (the police chief) all turn in fine performances alongside the star, Add Rowland V Lee's eerie direction and the result is a majestically macabre monochrome chiller. WESTERN It's a rare chance to see this Randolph Scott film in which he plays the marshal of the titular town who steps in when cowboys take up arms against local farmers. It's a lively stew of familiar confrontations, with a spirited Rhonda Fleming as the grocer's daughter getting in Scott's way. ALLEN EYLES (US 1945, BW)

DRAMA Sidney Poitier stars here as a teacher in London's East End who attempts to motivate his surly pupils to become responsible citizens. Director James Clavell's adaptation of ER Braithwaite's novel is a soft-centred affair, probably best remembered for Lulu singing the title song. though Judy Geeson puts in a credible turn as a lovelorn pupil. SCI-FI It's High Noon in space, as mining colony marshal Sean Connery confronts the pushers peddling lethal drugs to Jupiter moon workers so they'll produce more ore. This downbeat sci-fi tale is smoothly directed by Peter Hvams (Capricorn One), but his doggedly one-dimensional approach to both plot and character lets it down. ACTION Liam Neeson is a magnetic presence here as the leader of a group of men who survive a plane crash in the Alaskan tundra, only to face a pack of wolves. Neeson has gravitas in spades, but the film's attempts to build character are less compelling than the moments of all-out horror. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US/Can 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Villages by the Sea

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer Archaeologist Ben Robinson returns with more surprising stories about our coastal communities – and for the first time, he's venturing beyond England to explore all corners of the UK. His first destination is the stunning 17th-century Royal Burgh village of Culross, Fife. Its idyllic cobbled streets might appear frozen in time but this major centre for Scottish coal mining boasts the world's first undersea mineshaft – an engineering achievement once admired by King James VI.

At 8.00pm, there's another visit to our volunteer lifeboat crews in Saving Lives at Sea. This week's callouts include a capsized boat in the Channel with 30 people on board and, most unusually, a deer in the sea off Sussex. MICHAEL HOGAN

NATURE

Secret Life of the Forest

7.00pm Channel 5 Catch up: My5 Another night, another Channel 5 documentary set in God's own county – but when the wildlife is this abundant, who's counting? As we return to Dalby and Cropton Forests, summer is coming to an end. However, August sees a false autumn take place, with leaves turning orange and berries ripening too soon.

Down at the beaver pond, there's a captivating glimpse of kingfishers waiting patiently for any sign of small fish, then diving head-first into the water to catch their supper. Pine martens are back from the brink of extinction, but can motion-sensitive cameras capture rare footage of these elusive creatures? A team also uses specialist equipment to discover if the area's bat population is really on the rise. MH

Inside the Tower of London

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up: My5 This is such a jolly, fact-packed series, combining interesting nuggets of history with an insight into how the tourist attraction is run now and an introduction to those entertaining characters, the Beefeaters.

It was filmed earlier this year, so we see how the staff are busily preparing for the coronation of the new king.

Many of the ancient building's royal cyphers – monograms used on everything from ceremonial uniforms to partisans (weapons) – must be updated to reflect the change of monarch.

However, Ravenmaster Chris ("I'm half raven myself!") has other problems. Avian flu means the Tower's ravens must be caged 24/7 to keep them healthy. JR

DRAMA

Interview with the Vampire

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC2 Full series available on iPlayer

After last week's scenes of domestic violence – of the type that only hissy vampires can wreak on each other – Louis is nursing wounds, Lestat is banished and Claudia is out for blood. She wants her undead maker properly dead and sets about a diabolical scheme to dispose of him.

This languid series comes to a creepy and spectacularly gruesome conclusion, as if to remind viewers that it is actually a horror show. And there are several gentle twists that again depart from the original novel. A second run has been commissioned. Later tonight, there's a Bafta-winning 1993 profile of author Anne Rice, The Vampire's Life. PATRICK MULKERN

FILM OF THE DAY

Macbeth ★★★★ PG 11.20pm BBC4

There's a lovely autumnal gloom to this inventive, highly stylised take on Shakespeare's great tragedy of ambition, with Orson Welles on towering form as both director and star. Receiving its first TV showing in ten years, it's worth waiting up for. (1948)

Little Trains and Big Names with Pete Waterman 9.00pm More4

Catch up via C4 streaming

The idea of this series is that keen modeller Waterman meets famous fellow enthusiasts and admires their layouts. Except this time is different: Status Quo's Francis Rossi doesn't yet have a model railway to share with us, just a room where one could live, if Waterman manages to get him down down deeper and down with the idea. After a crash course in what Waterman calls "3D jigsaw puzzles", Rossi admits, "That is quite satisfying."

Meanwhile, one of Waterman's mates gives a masterclass in how to "weather" a layout so all the tiny buildings and bridges don't look too new. DAVID BUTCHER

COMEDY

Taskmaster

10.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming This show has had plenty of kooky contestants over the years, but this series boasts a particularly impressive crop. Look at Sam Campbell's artworks and choice of nicknames, or Lucy Beaumont's bizarre claims about ghostly bed-hopping dogs. And listen to her for too long and you might forget how deeply strangely Susan Wokoma has acted in every theatrical challenge.

Of course, the format itself encourages offbeat behaviour - this week, even the relatively down-toearth Sue Perkins and Julian Clary have to engage in what looks vaguely like ritual folk dance, following a task that pushes Perkins to utter what may go down in history as an all-time great TV quote. HUW FULLERTON

COMEDY DRAMA

Brassic

10.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now Brassic tends to exist in a world all of its own: the main characters have their sweary, filthy, very funny vibe, but then nine times out of ten the other people they come across share that same demeanour. That makes Brassicworld a riotously fun place to visit, but it's even more delicious when we put the gang in rare contact with what society deems normal.

A flat-out hilarious scene this week sees Vinnie (Joe Gilgun) meet a group of men who have kids about the same age – but these strangers are square, conventional types and Vinnie's effort to interact with them soon goes south. That said, his mates' efforts to steal ten grand from a caravan with a malfunctioning toilet are an awful lot messier. JACK SEALE

All Creatures Great and Small

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up: My5 It's starting to seem as though Channel 5's take on James Herriot's veterinary tales will cover the period of the Second World War in a markedly different way from the BBC version. You may recall that Christopher Timothy's James signed up to the RAF at the end of the third series, at which point the show left our screens for three years before returning for a Christmas special with the battle over.

Here, we've already witnessed Tristan departing to fight, and now it's the turn of James (Nicholas Ralph) to receive his enlistment papers. And with one episode to go, it doesn't feel as though we'll be getting a time jump that skips the conflict. Rather, a new dynamic at the practice is being depicted, as recent recruit Richard Carmody finally starts to impress both his colleagues and key client Mrs Pumphrey. DAVID BROWN

TRAGEDY This is the first in a loose trilogy of Shakespeare adaptations Orson Welles created for the screen and is capped by his towering performance in the lead. As the usurper of the Scottish crown, he vacillates between ambition, indecision and conscience with supreme skill. Admittedly, the accents are often impenetrable (not helped by the production's poor sound quality) and Jeanette Nolan's portrayal of Lady Macbeth may lack that essential steely quality, but the film still successfully conveys an atmosphere of evil and unease. Followed by a Talking Pictures special devoted to Welles. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1948, BW)

The Rainbow Jacket ★★ 9.30-11.30am

Talking Pictures TV

CRIME Writer TEB Clarke was the brains behind many of the Ealing comedies, but this racing drama also showed he had a social conscience. As the disgraced jockey who saves his protégé from a bribes scandal, Bill Owen enjoys one of his meatiest roles, and there are a couple of neat cameos from Sid James and Wilfrid Hyde White. DP (UK 1954)

The Far Country ★★★ 11.00am-1.00pm Film4

WESTERN This beautifully made western is set in snowy gold rush territory. James Stewart is the troublemaking cattle herder who goes toe to toe with John McIntire's corrupt judge. Director Anthony Mann makes striking use of the landscapes, and there's an intense fury to the action sequences.

TONY SLOMAN (US 1954, HD)

Guns at Batasi ★★★★ 1.50-3.55pm 5 Action

DRAMA Overlooked on its release as an exercise in stiff-upper-lipmanship, this is in fact a fascinating epitaph for the British Empire and Imperial derring-do. It's the story of insurrection in a newly independent African state and the response of the resident British army. Richard Attenborough is on top form as the apoplectic RSM. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1964, some swearing, BW, HD)

Footsteps in the Fog  2.50-4.40pm Film4

THRILLER Jean Simmons and her then husband, Stewart Granger, returned to Britain at the peak of their Hollywood stardom for this Victorian melodrama. Granger plays the wife murderer whose plot to kill the Cockney maid (Simmons) who is blackmailing him backfires. Finlay Currie, Ronald Squire and the glamorous Belinda Lee also feature among the fine cast. TS (UK/US 1955, HD)

Apollo 13 ★★★★ 8.00-10.50pm ITV4

PG

SPACE DRAMA In April 1970, astronaut Jim Lovell and his crew were bound for the Moon when an oxygen tank exploded, leaving them potentially stranded. Partially filmed in weightless conditions. Ron Howard's reconstruction of the events that followed is a technical tour de force. Tom Hanks brings his everyman charm to Lovell, while Kevin Bacon and Bill Paxton offer contrasts as Jack Swigert and Fred Haise. AT (US 1995. may be edited for language, HD)

Caddyshack ★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Comedy Central E

Ħ

COMEDY This wonderfully crass romp from Harold Ramis breezes along in a cheerfully tasteless manner. Loudmouth millionaire Rodney Dangerfield gets up snobbish Ted Knight's nose when he attempts to take over a golf club, setting the scene for a competitive tee-off. Bill Murray steals the show as a groundsman battling the resident gophers. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1980, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The Possession ★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Sky Sci-Fi 🖽

HORROR When their teenage daughter (Natasha Calis) becomes strangely obsessed with an antique wooden box bought at a yard sale, a divorced couple learns she has become possessed by an evil spirit. Danish director Ole Bornedal has made far better movies than this Exorcist knock-off (1994's Nightwatch for one), but it's a serviceable little shocker nonetheless.

ALAN JONES (US 2012, violence)

The Road ★★★★ 11.15pm-1.35am Great Movies

DRAMA John Hillcoat's bleak adaptation of the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by the late Cormac McCarthy is set in a post-apocalypse future, where a man and his son make a perilous journey across America. Viggo Mortensen is riveting as the careworn dad, while Kodi Smit-McPhee gives a touching performance as the vulnerable boy. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2009, violence, swearing, nudity)

GARDENING

Beechgrove Gardens in

Winter 7.30pm (10.00pm in Wales) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Recent miserable weather may have made you feel that your gardening days are over until spring but, in a four-part series, Carole Baxter and Scott Smith have a list of seasonal jobs that you could be doing now, including planting tulips, insulating the greenhouse and encouraging wildlife.

In the last of this series of Gardeners' World at 8pm (not Wales), Monty Don is also planting tulips, and sowing broad beans. Horticultural inspiration comes from Adam Frost's visit to the Lake District and Joe Swift's report on the water features in a stunning East Sussex garden.

TRAVEL

Susan Calman's Grand Day Out

8pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5 Susan Calman's celebration of wonderful sights, lovely people and "cute wee doggies" continues with her feeling surprisingly romantic in Kent.

After stopping to smell the roses at Hever Castle, she enjoys being punted around Canterbury, where the low bridges don't trouble her at all, but she's warned her lack of height could be an issue when she tries fencing at Penshurst Place.

While she's worried about making a lover's token ("I'm only pouring molten metal into my hand!"), the funniest sight is her expression when she pops a sour cherry into her mouth. JR

DRAMA

The Good Ship Murder

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5 This is the first properly decent episode, the irony being that it's a case of abduction rather than murder. Though, admittedly, The Good Ship Kidnap doesn't have guite the same ring to it. The passenger being "shipnapped" is bride-to-be Cecile from her hen party in Palma. Naturally, first officer Kate just happens to be in attendance and, of course, Jack is also embroiled, as he's out on the beers with the stags. So once again, their work duties get forgotten about in favour of some sleuthing – though Jack does also find time for a song, his eclectic playlist now including Needles and Pins. A tie-in album from Shayne Ward must surely be in the works. DAVID BROWN

9.00pm, 10.05pm Sky Atlantic Catch up via Now

Behind that bland title lies an explosively political drama, telling a fictional story inspired by journalist

A cruise ship in the Mediterranean rescues a boatload of refugees who might otherwise have drowned in their bid to leave Africa. The stories of these desperate people and the privileged bid to leave Africa. The stories of these desperate people and the privileged regular passengers intertwine as a crisis looms: the ship's guests will do anything not to be sent home. Amid the thrills is an assessment of the criminality and failures of governance that lead to so many people across Europe and Africa making insanely dangerous voyages, in the desperate quest for a bearable life. JACK SEALE

Fabrizio Gatti's non-fiction book Bilal.

Red Dwarf

10.00pm (not Wales) BBC2All episodes available on iPlayer
Remember the radiation leak that killed the Red Dwarf crew in the very first episode? Well, it's still playing on the mind of Lister but, thanks to a handy portal, there's now the possibility of time-travelling back to a point before the accident, altering the future and perhaps discovering why there now exists a photograph of him marrying Kristine Kochanski.

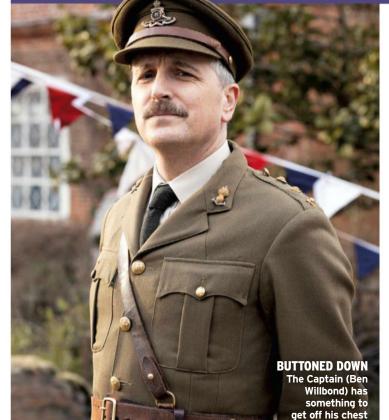

Incidentally, this trip three million years into the past involves a visit to the Ganymede Holiday Inn, which, in reality, is Manchester's Midland Hotel, the base for the recent Conservative Party conference. Something tells me that a certain Arnold J Rimmer would have found himself very much at home there. DB

COMEDY DRAMA Breeders

10.00pm Sky Comedy/Showcase Catch up via Now

A classic diary mix-up lays the groundwork for this episode. Ally (Daisy Haggard) has confused her weeks, so instead of the romantic evening out she has planned for Paul (Martin Freeman) and herself, they're hosting a dinner party for Darren (Patrick Baladi, always a treat), his girlfriend Siobhan (Grainne Keenan), vicar Susie (Andi Osho) and, as it transpires, reams of unexpected guests who drop in throughout the evening. Some visitors are more welcome than others.

There are some tender moments, but the daftest predicament falls on Darren, who ends up paying a taxi driver £500 to take his phone on a trip around London. FRANCES TAYLOR

SITCOM Ghosts

8.30pm BBC1 All eps on iPlayer Line dancing for the non-living residents of Button House, and "one more massive bender" for the parents-to-be... there's lots of fun in the penultimate episode. And yet fans may feel a little on edge at times. Such an atmosphere is created by Robin who, after a mathematical epiphany, is convinced that one of the ghosts is due to move on.

"Bilge, bunkum and toffee," counters the Captain (Ben Willbond). But is it? And you sense that the former Army officer is both anxious and reflective. Cue another of those flashbacks that make this series really sing – and it's been written and played typically sensitively.

Teamwork is the key to Ghosts, and that's stressed movingly in a line from Jim Howick (Pat) that could easily be aimed at his acting colleagues. That TV camaraderie was born in Horrible Histories, still running but with a new cast (10.30am CBBC). MARK BRAXTON

DAY

■ The Nest ★★★★ 11.05pm-12.45am BBC2

DRAMA Sean Durkin made his belated return to directing following 2011's remarkable Martha Marcy May Marlene with this 1980s-set movie starring Jude Law as a finance whizz who moves his family from the US to rural England. While he appears cool, calm and collected, Law is, in fact, paddling furiously to stay afloat. This is a subtle, creeping study of a family in crisis that recalls the dramas of Ingmar Bergman. Law is perfectly cast as the superficially composed family man, and Carrie Coon is superb as his transactional wife. STEVE MORRISSEY (US 2019, swearing, a sex scene, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

Bad Blood ★★★★

10.10am-12.20pm

Talking Pictures TV

CRIME Mike Newell's simmering New Zealand-set movie is based on a notorious 1940s multiple-murder case. It stars Jack Thompson as reclusive farmer Stanley Graham, who refuses to surrender his weapons to the authorities to help with the war effort. Thompson is superb, but Martyn Sanderson steals the show in support. JOHN FERGUSON (UK/NZ 1982)

Tohruk ★★★

11.00am-1.15pm Film4

WAR Hollywood icon Rock Hudson finds himself surrounded by a British cast (including Percy Herbert and Norman Rossington) in this wartime tale of a mission to blow up Rommel's fuel lines. Director Arthur Hiller makes heavy going of the set-up, but this remains watchable thanks to the solid script by Leo V Gordon, who also acts in the film. TONY SLOMAN (US 1966, some violence, HD)

The Bounty Hunter $\star\star\star$ 2.15-3.55pm 5 Action

WESTERN A straightforward yet satisfying Randolph Scott western has the stone-faced one setting out after three bank robbers, all of whom are in disguise as respectable townsfolk. This was one of only two movies made by Transcona Enterprises, a company owned by Judy Garland and her husband Sid Luft - the other one was a little movie called A Star Is Born. TS (US 1954)

MYSTERY Adapted from RC Sherriff's West End hit, this was Ralph Richardson's sole venture as a film director, and a pretty fair job he makes of it, too. He also re-creates his stage role as the timid bank clerk whose dose of amnesia coincides with a murder and a robbery. The strength of the picture is that you're never quite sure whether he's bluffing or baffled. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1952, BW)

THRILLER Brad Pitt stars here as an intelligence officer whose allegiances are tested when he's told his wife and fellow agent Marion Cotillard is a German spy. Director Robert Zemeckis fills his film with intimate moments and fiery action, while Cotillard shines in a role that plays on her angelic aura. Only the iciest heart could fail to be moved by the emotional finale. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2016, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse)

CHILLER In Irvin Kerschner's glossy thriller, photographer Fave Dunaway develops a psychic link with a killer and witnesses his gruesome murders while they are being committed. It's decent enough slasher fare, although lacking in any deep psychological substance. Incidentally. Dunaway's gallery photos were actually taken by Helmut Newton. DRAMA Director Martin Scorsese drew on his upbringing in New York's Little Italy to create a work that is now celebrated as a keystone of 1970s American cinema. Food and Farming Awards

Sunday 12.30pm Radio 4

N ONE SIDE of her family, Thomasina Miers had a grandmother who "cooked the most amazing waffles", and on the other a grandfather who "grew the most amazing fruit and veg", all of which she loved apart from rhubarb. "But now I love rhubarb!"

The 47-year-old chef, restaurateur and campaigner is the head of the judging panel for this year's BBC Food and Farming Awards, and the "grandparent principle" is very much in her mind as she and her fellow judges consider the merits of 21 finalists in seven categories.

"It's the idea that if we are to have a sustainable food future, then in the ways that we both buy food and cook food, we need to think about how our grandparents lived.

"They didn't have an avocado for breakfast every day. They'd eat meat maybe only once or twice a week because it was a treat. Obviously they would cook far more than we do. They wouldn't have been eating out very much. I feel that the current generation has been sold a lie - that we can eat conveniently, we can eat what we like and when we like, without any consequences. But the truth is that of

we're to protect the future everything that represents about a third of it." The BBC Food and Farming Awards first took place in 2000. The categories have changed over the years, reflecting new concerns, and in many contributes to climate change, the production and consumption of food ways Miers's career has undergone a parallel evolution. Winning MasterChef in 2005 was her breakthrough moment, and within two years she founded Wahaca, a chain of Mexican food restaurants, where "sustainability was always inherent in our values". Half of Wahaca's menu is veg-based, it has been carbon-neutral since 2016, and earlier this year steak tacos were taken off the menu because of the meat's high carbon footprint.

Add to that, the cookery books she writes and her food column in The Guardian and she's a natural to preside over these awards - and no category is closer to her heart than the Farming Today Farming for the Future Award.

"Farmers are absolutely at the forefront of looking after the planet," Miers enthuses. "They are these incredible custodians of how we eat. Their role is much more important than society gives them credit for."

"Regenerative" is a word that crops up a lot in any conversation with Miers about food production, and while she says there is no technical definition, it broadly refers to the maintenance of healthy soil and ecosystems, and the reduction - if not the elimination - of fertilisers and pesticides. "You farm with nature, not against it."

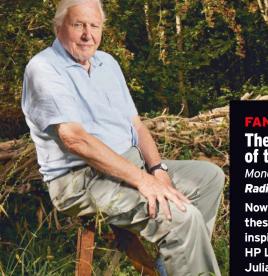

THE THREE FINALISTS in the Farming Today Farming for the Future category the England-wide Green Farm Collective, a Devon farmer dedicated to soil health, and a fruit and veg box scheme in Sheffield - have all been the subject of editions of On Your Farm (Sunday, 6.35am, Radio 4) in recent weeks, and in all these projects, as well as others in the awards, Miers sees hope for the future.

"I can't possibly give away who's won what! But believe me there are some real heroes out there. To take just one example, I tasted 14 varieties of blueberries - all delicious and all different. You might think that we don't need 14 varieties of blueberries, but the point is variety is absolutely crucial to soil health."

Miers says it was "also wonderful to see the work being done in the interests of people on lower incomes", where affordability comes without compromise to quality. "I was thrilled to discover that we can grow chickpeas in this country, and thus make hummus and dhals delicious food that isn't expensive. The fact is that we can still eat incredibly pleasurably in ways that are much better for the planet."

The generation of Miers's grandparents was doing that, possibly without even realising it. Now it's this generation's chance to pick up where they left off. SIMON O'HAGAN

The Planet Earth Podcast

Saturday 2.45pm Radio 4

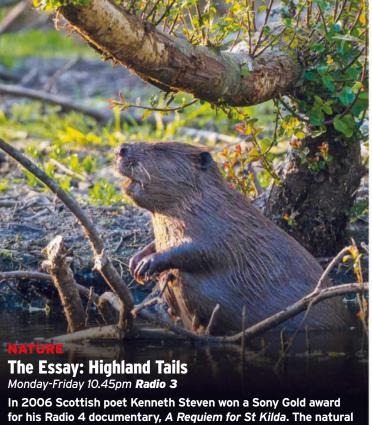

If you're enjoying David Attenborough's Planet Earth III (Sunday, BBC1), this eight-part series, in which executive producer Mike Gunton describes the nuts and bolts of filming wildlife, is essential listening. Just wait for the moment when the team is trying to film lions hunting elephants at night and a fight ensues. "That's it. We're dead," thought producer Jonny Keeling. Attenborough contributes along with other experts, film-makers and scientists. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Samaritan Number One

Wednesday 2.15pm Radio 4

Marking the 70th anniversary of the Samaritans, Anna Linstrum's drama honours Anglican priest Chad Varah (above), the man who founded the organisation in 1953. Samaritans volunteers are all given a number - hence the title - and we learn how Varah (played by Reece Shearsmith) was moved to act after presiding over the funeral of a 14-year-old girl. While Varah's world feels very different to today's, the need for the Samaritans doesn't change. so'H world of his homeland is in his blood, and in this series of evocative essays, he considers five stories of the re-introduction of wild animals into the Highlands. Who knew that in Victorian times Scotland was home to American bison? Beavers (above), reindeer, sea eagles and wallabies also come under his gaze, with each essay adorned with Steven's poetry. SO'H

AMBRIDGE DIARY The Archers

Sunday-Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

The storyline of arch manipulator Rob Titchener (Timothy Watson, below) asking to be baptised produces an unholy row this week, when his family descends on the area for the ceremony. With the Archers and Titcheners at battle lines, Alan struggles to keep the peace. Brian has some difficult news to impart to a relative, but his approach may not be the best way. Paul is almost at the end of his tether with tension at the Stables, there's a misunderstanding between Pip, Ruth and Stella - and a Halloween party causes ructions. DAVID CRAWFORD

SELF-HELP Heavyweight

Don't be fooled by the selfdeprecating, ironic tones of host Jonathan Goldstein. His podcast, now seven years old and 46 episodes long, never fails to be profound, surprising and often moving, as he invites guests to uncover long-held personal burdens and hold them up to the light, before together they head off in pursuit of truth. The resulting moments of selfdiscovery, reunion and redemption will leave you with a catch in your throat and optimism for the human condition. CAROLINE FROST

HISTORY

A Race around the World

History podcasts tend to the broad sweep – take, for example, The Rest Is History – but here's one that homes in on a remarkable single episode and sheds light on the age in which it played out. It's 1889, and two female writers – Elizabeth Bisland and Nellie Bly – are embarking on an incredible challenge: to race each other around the world in under 80 days. One goes east and one goes west, and storyteller Adrien Behn – herself an intrepid solo traveller – is in her element. SIMON O'HAGAN

CONVERSATION Out to Lunch with Ade Edmondson

The business lunch, as guest lan Rankin remarks here, is a threatened species. The podcast lunch however, in which new host Ade Edmondson (replacing Jay Rayner) entertains the likes of Chrissie Hynde, Reece Shearsmith and Rankin, continues to go strong. Next time you're prodding an egg on toast to the sound of The World at One, remember that in some smart London eaterie they're browsing on spider crab croquettes, braised oxtail and leeks with pecorino sauce, washed down with chenin blanc. And all they have to do in return is talk. Edmondson is a generous host, but his decision to write and perform his own signature tune is the kind of move that Sir Humphrey would have described as "most courageous". DAVID HEPWORTH

Were You Raised by Wolves?

This is, intrinsically, a lightweight piece of audio fluff but – and it is a big but – there's nothing wrong with that. Nick Leighton and Leah Bonnema aren't trying to change the world, just offer some comic relief on the theme of manners and etiquette. I now know, for example, to break off a bitesize piece from a bread roll on a side plate before buttering, not to slice it. The amiable hosts would send a handwritten thank-you note to listeners if they could. ANNA JONES

HUMOUR Mistopian

Since April, Alex and Patrick, "two nerds obsessed with useless trivia and technical correctness", have been getting to the bottom of some of the world's most wildly inaccurate predictions. The pair are annoying and they know it. They're the embodiment of your pub quiz-loving friend, who looks at you askance and then says, "Well, actually..." TRUE CRIME Vishal

After watching the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer on 29 July 1981, excited eight-vear-old Vishal Mehrotra travelled home with his family to Putney. While his sister and nanny went to a chemist, he announced he'd walk the short distance home. He never arrived. Vishal's skull and some rib bones were found months later in a shallow grave in West Sussex. Over 40 years later, no one has been charged with his murder. This ten-part series explores this ghastly tragedy and how poorly Vishal's father was treated. AJ

BIOGRAPHY

About a Boy: the Story of Vladimir Putin

The title might suggest a Hugh Grant romcom, but there's nothing sentimental about this investigation of the psyche of Vladimir Putin before his rise to power. In the vein of Simon Sebag Montefiore's Young Stalin, this series explores the environment that shaped one of Russia's most ruthless leaders. This is the world of the unforgiving Leningrad dvor: the courtyards where Soviet children scarred by the ripples of the Second World War battled for supremacy over their peers. TOM GOULDING

Our political leaders could learn a thing or two from podcasters

In the same month the population of Britain appeared to agree on how difficult they found it to endure the speaking voices of the leaders of its major political parties, my podcast listening threw up two examples of how it really ought to be done. Both were provided by gentlemen who have in recent years withdrawn from the public roles they once occupied with distinction.

The first came from former MP Rory Stewart on The Rest Is Politics. Called upon at short notice to provide a brief explainer of the vexed history of the conflict between Israelis and Palestinians, he summed up the key points in just over five minutes, avoiding over-simplification or the placing of fingers on scales, and not even allowing the inclusion of words like "ventriloquise" and "contiguous" to put any kind of kink in his essentially conversational delivery.

HE SECOND CAME from former vicar Richard Coles on The Rabbit Hole Detectives, the series in which panellists are invited to cover the main points of a subject, ideally leaving their colleagues and listeners wishing to know more. Coles's ten minutes on the story of the remote Hebridean island of St Kilda was a modest masterpiece of the storytellers' art. It avoided not only deviation and repetition but also any employment of the expressions "like" and "kind of", conversational tics through which we conceal the hesitation that riddles our everyday speech. And, like Stewart's, his was delivered in the tone of sweet reason itself.

Both speakers no doubt had notes in front of them, but they were artful enough not to sound as though they were consulting them. This is presumably what a lifetime of being called upon to say a few words has taught them. One can only wonder why so few of their contemporaries have absorbed the same lesson. Both men are built for podcasting, which is one of the few opportunities contemporary life throws up for a person to speak for ten minutes without a script and without interruption. It's to be hoped politics and the church can get by without them.

Uncomfortable Conversations with Josh Szeps

The need for civil discourse when grappling with complex and provocative issues has never felt more urgent. Here, Australian journalist Josh Szeps provides the space for plenty of thorny controversies. Drama: Lolly Willowes

3.00pm Radio 4 With Halloween fast approaching, this is a canny (rather than uncanny) repeat of a 2021 drama, Louise Brealey (above), of Sherlock fame, plays the eponymous Lolly, the central character in Sylvia Townsend Warner's protofeminist tale, first published in 1926. Lolly has been put upon by her family for her entire life, forced into the role of an unpaid carer and destined for a lonely, miserable spinsterhood, But this middle-aged woman is determined to get a taste of freedom – even if that means some ungodly gatherings in the forests of the Chiltern hills and a pact with an empathetic devil. A gentle, witty, very satisfying tale of finding female independence. ANNA JONES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Drama: She's Not There

3.00pm Radio 4

A tangled web of deceit, betrayal and misdirection lies at the heart of the first British radio adaptation of Pierre Boileau and Thomas Narcejac's 1952 novel Celle qui n'était plus, later the inspiration for French movie classic Les Diaboliques (1954). A desperate wife, her cruel husband and his enigmatic mistress make up the ménage à trois who are ensnared in a murderous scheme that is never short of twists and turns. Claustrophobic and unsettling, Dominic Power's adaptation is also fiendishly entertaining, while allusions to 50s France's turmoil over Vichy and its colonial present conjure up a vivid picture of time and place. The authors' macabre brand of psychological suspense and mystery soon saw Alfred Hitchcock come a-calling. The result was Vertigo, based on their third novel. D'entre les morts. JEREMY ASPINALL

Drama on 3: Hamlet Noir

7.30pm Radio 3 The noirish nature of Laurence

Olivier's Oscar-winning Hamlet is taken a step further in this gripping adaptation set and recorded in modern-day Denmark, which filters the Bard's timeless tragedy through the prism of Scandi noir. The original text charting Hamlet's quest to avenge his father's murder dovetails deftly with tenacious detective Eva Holm's investigation into the fatalities that are linked to the Danish royal court. The play's melancholy narrative, flawed characters and serial killing in a bleak landscape make it a perfect match for a genre that deals in such materials. Everything is enhanced by an all-Scandinavian cast and the visceral use of immersive sound. JEREMY ASPINALL

According to the Medieval Murder Map – a project from the University of Cambridge – the most violent city of the era was neither London nor York, but Oxford. And the key culprits were its combative and murderous students. BBC New Generation Thinker Hetta Howes seeks to discover why Oxford was such a deadly destination in the Middle Ages, and to locate lingering traces of its murderous past.

7.30 Drama on 3: Hamlet Noir

In the second work in Radio 3's three-play series, Inspired by Hamlet, Shakespeare's timeless tragedy takes on a Scandi noir twist in this new adaptation by Charlotte Melen that interweaves the original text with a detective narrative. Set in present-day Denmark, Prince Hamlet is on a quest to avenge his father's murder. Meanwhile, detective Eva Holm investigates the suspicious deaths at the Danish court, but as she unearths the truth and Hamlet edges closer to ultimate catharsis, both find themselves entangled in a web of treachery and corruption. TODAY'S CHOICES

Fed with Dr Chris van Tulleken

11.00am Radio 4

Only six months after the subject was dealt with on Radio 4's Natural Histories. Dr Chris van Tulleken explores how a jungle fowl was manipulated into the world's most popular meat chicken. Over an eight-part series - co-presented with twin brother Xand (of the hit podcast A Thorough Examination) – he goes into much more detail about exactly what happens to a chicken before it arrives cooked on our plate. No preview was available although it's fairly safe to say that this may all be too much for vegetarians. Others may be titillated by the prospect of invisible forces dictating our eating habits. "I see these Vespers as a great incantatory ritual that connects the sacred with the pagan, the intimate with the collective.' So says French conductor Simon-Pierre Bestion of his avowedly personal "vision" of Monteverdi's celebrated Vespers of 1610. With bumped-up orchestrations, the original choral textures re-voiced in the style of Corsican folk polyphony and almost an hour of extra music, not all by Monteverdi himself, Radio 3 listeners will doubtless be divided over their responses to the result. Beethoven (1770-1827) 1/5. Birth of a Legend: the First Piano Concerto. Donald Macleod explores five of the composer's most famous works across his life, tracking the journey of these pieces, all of major personal significance for this complex and troubled man. This first instalment looks at the young Beethoven's relationship with the city of Vienna, and his First Piano Concerto, which was to be a key work in his triumphant debut as a performer in the city. And there's a look at Beethoven's encounters with Mozart and Haydn.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Drama: Rehab 2.15pm Radio 4

Writers are often drawn to the dramatic device of the interview in which the balance of power shifts between the protagonists. Philip Palmer's new play is set in Glasgow over six weeks. Social worker Jenny (Phyllis Logan, above) does what she can to prevent teenage Finn (Brian Vernel) from re-offending. But soon boundaries are being crossed. Is the scenario depicted authentic? It exploits something we've heard a lot about – offenders deciding not only to go straight but to help others in their situation - and the script certainly gives the impression that Palmer has done his homework. He's had an interesting career, not only as a prolific writer of all kinds of radio drama over the past two decades, but also as the author of several science-fiction novels. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

People Fixing the World

8.05am/3.05pm/11.05pm BBC World Service As we stagger from crisis to crisis, one thing remains the same: we're never precisely sure how humanitarian aid reaches the victims of conflict and destruction. In this episode Myra Anubi presents stories of generally unreported heroism. A hospital was constructed inside a train to treat Ukrainian civilians in a war zone. In Fiji a mobile workshop can travel to remote villages to make repairs after natural disasters. Finally we hear about the shape of things to come: already able to perform some medical operations in controlled environments, robots may soon be able to treat injured people in places too dangerous for human rescuers. A reminder of our innate compassion. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Miss Marple's Final Cases

6.00am/11.00/4.00pm/ 1.00am Radio 4 Extra Three dramatisations of short stories by Agatha Christie star June Whitfield as Miss Marple and start with one in which Marple utters the words no bumbling police officer wants to hear, "I don't mean to interrupt, but...". The ageing sleuth with the sprightly brain has been laid low by a debilitating fever, and her goddaughter Bunch is concerned that nothing will ebb her decline. Then, wouldn't you know it, the discovery of a dead body in a nearby house gives Miss Marple the invigorating boost she needs. Don't miss a word - the key clue is hidden in plain sight. ANNA JONES

Legend: the Joni Mitchell Story

4.00pm Radio 4

Joni Mitchell (above) turns 80 next week, eight years after she suffered a brain aneurysm that nearly killed her. In the past couple of years - amazingly - she has returned to live performance, but for her fans she was already a kind of miracle, her artistry providing nothing less than balm to the soul and a guide to life. In presenter Jesca Hoop's beautiful coinage, Joni is the "matriarchitect" of modern song, and in this first episode of six, Hoop takes us right back to the beginning and the story of Joni's upbringing on Canada's prairies - a landscape that would prove inspirational, for all that she took the first opportunity to escape it and head to the big city. "Mobility" is the essence of Joni's music. we're told. Hoop, herself a singer/songwriter, likewise takes us on a journey, and it's an enthralling one. simon o'hagan

A pupil of Vaughan Williams and the first British woman to score a feature film, Grace Williams (1906-77) is generally reckoned Wales's most distinguished female composer. To launch a BBC NOW series exploring her legacy in the light of other women composers, living and dead, her Second Symphony a 1950s score revealing the influences not just of VW but of Wagner, Mahler and Shostakovich - is prefaced by a premiere from the orchestra's current (and first female) composer affiliate, Sarah Lianne Lewis, and by the suite from Emilie – an opera about a pioneering French female physicist - by the Finnish composer Kajia Saarjaho, who died in June. Beware the Stare!

8.00pm Radio 4 Extra

First broadcast almost 20 years ago, this passion project from oral historian Alan Dein shines a light on sci-fi colossus John Wyndham's The Midwich Cuckoos, and its 1960 film adaptation Village of the Damned (above). The unsettling tale of telepathic children wreaking terror on Midwich's unsuspecting inhabitants has captivated generations of writers and directors. Dein sets out to reunite the cast and crew of the movie, going in search of the village of Midwich and pondering Wyndham's life and times. His blending of 20th-century English folk horror with science fiction led to unforgettable images of homicidal plants and parasitic alien broods, but of the man himself we know surprisingly little. TOM GOULDING

Heart and Soul

11.30am/11.30pm BBC World Service

When the Falun Gong religious movement emerged in China in the early 1990s, it was hailed for its blend of meditation, exercise and spiritual philosophy, even by the Chinese Communist Party. But by the end of that decade, the Chinese government considered Falun Gong "an evil cult" and launched a ruthless crackdown. The group says it is non-political and has accused the Chinese state of torture and murder while critics claim it has connections to far-right politicians. Banned on mainland China, Falun Gong believers then practised and protested in Hong Kong until draconian new laws have seen them all but vanish. Danny Vincent travels to the self-ruled island of Taiwan to talk to practitioners about their faith, persecution, the Chinese Communist Party and the future. JEREMY ASPINALL in the world of orchestral and symphonic music. Games are so immersive and often so epic that they need equally epic soundtracks. I believe some of the most creative and innovative music is being made for video games."

CV Born in London of British-Nigerian parentage, she read politics at Lancaster University and worked for a political charity before joining a BBC journalism trainee scheme which included a placement at BBC Plymouth. "I loved it. It was the making of me. Early on I asked if I could cover arts in general. including games. I felt like they weren't being covered as culture." She launched her own YouTube channel "just to cover things in my own voice." This led in 2018 to her hosting Daily Download for GINX

Esports TV. She has presented and played characters for video games for several years – she was Lydia Day Break in Paradise Killer (2020).

She has contributed to Radio 4's Front Row since 2020. In 2021, she co-wrote and presented Special

Social media - yes or no? "Can I hedge my bets and say somewhere media. But you have to think of it as a livestream of your achievements." Best moments "Being nominated for an ARIA for Front Row (Best New Radio 2's The Coronation Collection. with her husband, TV producer

Andrew Wood, and cat Licorice. "I love escaping into nature. I like to hike and go cold water swimming." First radio memory "I'm a huge Kiss FM fan. It was the first time radio felt like me, when I was a kid. I grew up in a house where music was really important. My parents loved Motown, soul, R&B and hip-hop. Kiss FM felt like a really lovely extension of that.'

Favourite broadcasters "George the Poet. He's so innovative, so authentic, so unapologetic and uncompromising. And Lauren Laverne on Desert Island Discs - a masterclass in being an empathetic, interesting, incisive interviewer."

Ambition/Dream job "I love a magazine show. I have a really broad range of interests and it's really easy to be pigeonholed. I'd love to host things like The One Show and This Morning.

Secret skills "I am an incredibly obsessed surfer. I've surfed in Australia, Hawaii, California... even in land-locked Austria! It was an artificial wave." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Sound of Gaming on BBC Radio 3

(first Saturday of the month, 3-4pm). "Video game in the world of orchestral and symphonic music. Games are so immersive and often so epic that they need equally epic soundtracks. I believe some of the most creative and innovative music is being made for video games."

Nigerian parentage, she read politics at Lancaster University and worked for a political charity before joining the making of me. Early on I asked channel "just to cover things in my hosting Daily Download for GINX played characters for video games for several years – she was Lydia Day Break in Paradise Killer (2020).

She has contributed to Radio 4's Front Row since 2020. In 2021, she Characters for BBC3.

me. In the studio you're frantically which feels awful. Worst case: you're on the phone and you have to say, 'Well, thank you so much!'"

with her husband, TV producer

Andrew Wood, and cat Licorice. "I love escaping into nature. I like to hike and go cold water swimming." First radio memory "I'm a huge Kiss FM fan. It was the first time radio felt like me, when I was a kid. I grew up in a house where music was really important. My parents loved Motown, soul, R&B and hip-hop. Kiss FM felt like a really lovely extension of that.'

Favourite broadcasters "George the Poet. He's so innovative, so authentic, so unapologetic and uncompromising. And Lauren Laverne on Desert Island Discs - a masterclass in being an empathetic, interesting, incisive interviewer."

Ambition/Dream job "I love a magazine show. I have a really broad range of interests and it's really easy to be pigeonholed. I'd love to host things like The One Show and This Morning."

Secret skills "I am an incredibly obsessed surfer. I've surfed in Australia, Hawaii, California... even in land-locked Austria! It was an artificial wave." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Face behind the voice Elle Osili-Wood BBC Radio 3

Current job

New presenter of Sound of Gaming on BBC Radio 3 (first Saturday of the month, 3-4pm). "Video game players are the largest consumers in the world of orchestral and symphonic music. Games are so immersive and often so epic that they need equally epic soundtracks. I believe some of the most creative and innovative music is being made for video games."

CV Born in London of British-Nigerian parentage, she read politics at Lancaster University and worked for a political charity before joining a BBC journalism trainee scheme which included a placement at BBC Plymouth. "I loved it. It was the making of me. Early on I asked if I could cover arts in general. including games. I felt like they weren't being covered as culture." She launched her own YouTube channel "just to cover things in my own voice." This led in 2018 to her hosting Daily Download for GINX

Andrew Wood, and cat Licorice. "I love escaping into nature. I like to hike and go cold water swimming." First radio memory "I'm a huge Kiss FM fan. It was the first time radio felt like me, when I was a kid. I grew up in a house where music was really important. My parents loved Motown, soul, R&B and hip-hop. Kiss FM felt like a really lovely extension of that.'

Favourite broadcasters "George the Poet. He's so innovative, so authentic, so unapologetic and uncompromising. And Lauren Laverne on Desert Island Discs - a masterclass in being an empathetic, interesting, incisive interviewer."

Ambition/Dream job "I love a magazine show. I have a really broad range of interests and it's really easy to be pigeonholed. I'd love to host things like The One Show and This Morning.'

Secret skills "I am an incredibly obsessed surfer. I've surfed in Australia, Hawaii, California... even in land-locked Austria! It was an artificial wave." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Face behind the voice Elle Osili-Wood BBC Radio 3

Current job New presenter of Sound of Gaming on BBC Radio 3 (first Saturday of the month, 3-4pm).

"Video game

players are the largest consumers in the world of orchestral and symphonic music. Games are so immersive and often so epic that they need equally epic soundtracks. I believe some of the most creative and innovative music is being made for video games."

CV Born in London of British-Nigerian parentage, she read politics at Lancaster University and worked for a political charity before joining a BBC journalism trainee scheme which included a placement at BBC Plymouth. "I loved it. It was the making of me. Early on I asked if I could cover arts in general. including games. I felt like they weren't being covered as culture." She launched her own YouTube channel "just to cover things in my own voice." This led in 2018 to her hosting Daily Download for GINX

Esports TV. She has presented and played characters for video games for several years – she was Lydia Day Break in Paradise Killer (2020).

She has contributed to Radio 4's Front Row since 2020. In 2021, she co-wrote and presented Special Characters for BBC3.

Social media - yes or no? "Can I hedge my bets and say somewhere in the middle? I would love to be a hermit and not have any social media. Off air Lives in Clerkenwell, London. with her husband, TV producer

Andrew Wood, and cat Licorice. "I love escaping into nature. I like to hike and go cold water swimming." First radio memory "I'm a huge Kiss FM fan. It was the first time radio felt like me, when I was a kid. I grew up in a house where music was really important. My parents loved Motown, soul, R&B and hip-hop. Kiss FM felt like a really lovely extension of that."

Favourite broadcasters "George the Poet. He's so innovative, so authentic, so unapologetic and uncompromising. And Lauren Laverne on Desert Island Discs - a masterclass in being an empathetic, interesting, incisive interviewer."

Ambition/Dream job "I love a magazine show. I have a really broad range of interests and it's really easy to be pigeonholed. I'd love to host things like The One Show and This Morning."

Secret skills "I am an incredibly obsessed surfer. I've surfed in Australia, Hawaii, California... even in land-locked Austria! It was an artificial wave." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Countdown

Monday-Friday 2.10pm C4

T FELT LIKE we were always on our way to some freezing destination on the south coast. I would be sitting in the back of my parents' car, only vaguely aware of my sister alongside me, as she lost herself in the pages of a Nancy Drew Mystery. My focus was on a different world, as exciting to me as any tales of Crocodile Island or cities buried beneath the desert. It was as simple as it was seductive, and the gateway was always a French or German vocabulary book.

Ever the reluctant conversationalist on these endless journeys, I'd pretend to guess at "I spy" while silently mouthing the German for "dragonfly" (Libelle) or the French for "grapefruit" (pamplemousse). I will never know quite why I wanted to learn these words – certainly it wasn't for homework. I just know I needed them. It was the start of a lifelong passion; some children collected stamps, I collected words.

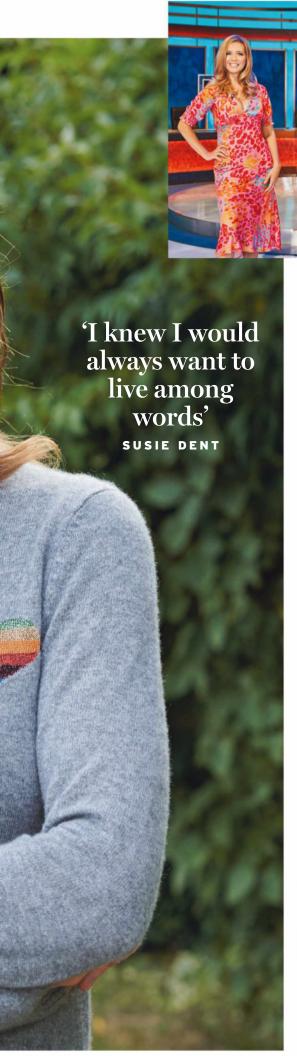

At my convent school, I continued the habit of eavesdropping that I'd developed as a small child, tuning in to the conversations of nuns and fellow pupils as we approached the confessional or chalked hopscotch patterns in the playground. And, like everyone, I occasionally got things very wrong. I spent years singing a hymn called "I am the Lord of the Dance Settee", fondly imagining Jesus clapping along from his comfy sofa.

T UNIVERSITY, I began to notice the invisible threads that join our languages - the family trees that reveal that not only are a mortgage and a mortuary linked, but that the word for a muscle in each language involves a tiny mouse because a flexed muscle looks so much like a mouse scurrying beneath the skin. But it was German that had me wrapped around its finger. Who could resist such beauties as Fernweh, the longing to be far away? Or admire the usefulness of Verschlimmbesserung, an attempted improvement that ends up making things worse? As the jottings in my notebooks proliferated, I had little sense where it would take me, but I did know I would always want to live among words.

And that's how it panned out. Years later, working as a lexicographer, one rainy lunchtime I casually pulled down a book from the shelf in my office: Walter Skeat's 1882 Etymological Dictionary of the English Language. It was from Skeat I learned there is a "crypt" within "apocryphal", and that "sarcasm" and "sarcophagus" are brothers-in-arms. This was linguistic archaeology: digging up the foundations of words I loved gave them an extra dimension of magic.

A career can feel like a long and slow-moving thing, yet the word itself is rooted in something far more energetic. Beginning with the Romans' carrus, "wheeled vehicle", "career" is a sibling of

The true tale of a man executed for a murder he didn't commit

For all that Britain likes to brag of its multiculturalism, racial inequity isn't a thing of the past, and while it may be improving, one only needs to look at recent history to see entrenched racism pervading society. Nadifa Mohamed explores an aspect of this in The Fortune Men (Viking, £9.99), a novelisation of a reallife event in 1950s Cardiff: the conviction and execution of Mahmood Mattan for a murder he didn't commit. Mohamed's compassionate rendering of the story shines a light on the injustice of the system. Nadifa Mohamed's viewpoint: page 11

MARY MAKES IT EASY MARY BERRY Mary Berry Makes It Easy Thursday 7.30pm BBC2 Mary Berry is back with a collection of 120 recipes to inspire people to get cooking. For those who need more of a visual aid than the beautiful photography of Mary Makes It Easy (BBC Books, £28), there's the tie-in TV show airing this week, demonstrating a more hands-on version of just how easy it can be to eat well at home with minimal effort and fuss. Berry doesn't fret about bells and whistles but focuses on the delicious food we know and love her for.

THE GARDENING BOOK MONTY DON Gardeners' World Fridays BBC2 It seems like autumn has finally – and firmly – settled in for the season, but this doesn't mean we can rest on our laurels when it comes to the garden. Luckily, Monty Don is at hand with his latest publication simply titled The Gardening Book (BBC Books, £28), ready to offer help and advice to anyone new to gardening. Offering tips on how to grow more than 100 popular flowers, food and shrubs, this guide will assist anyone who needs some inspiration on how to make the most out of their green spaces. RHIANNON THOMAS

"chariot". In English, it first described a knight's advance at full gallop in medieval jousting tournaments. In other words, a career is all about proceeding at pace, with perhaps a few unexpected swerves thrown in.

LIKE CLOCKWORK Rachel Riley, Jimmy

Carr and Susie Dent on Eight out of Ten

Cats Does Countdow

My own took a surprising turn when I ended up on Channel 4's wonderful Countdown. There, in Dictionary Corner, it became my job to find long words and to read dictionaries at top speed. I'm also lucky enough to do the same job (of a sort) in the comedy version, Eight out of Ten Cats Does Countdown, where I'm in a constant struggle with the anarchic forces of Jimmy Carr. Despite Jimmy's best efforts to persuade the nation that my own writing is a form of euthanasia (look out for a sketch featuring him chopping up a copy of my new book on air), I feel the pull of the written word just as strongly as I did on those car journeys all those years ago.

In that new book, Interesting Stories about Curious Words, I have brought together thousands of my favourite joyfully eclectic stories about the language we use every day. In selecting them I applied just one criterion: that every fact and every tale might elicit an "ah!", an "of course!" or maybe even a "what?!"

For a flavour of all three, take the story behind "chance one's arm". Legend has it that the phrase rests in an attempt by the 15th-century earl of Kildare to end a long-running, bloody quarrel between his family and the Ormondes. Taking refuge in St Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, he is said to have cut a hole in the door and stuck his arm through, offering the Ormondes the chance to take his hand in peace rather than chop it off. In admiration and with not a small degree of relief, this they did, and the feud was ended.

Curious minds will always need curious words. What's more, with the stories in my book to hand, it's my hope that you'll never be lost for words, however deeply you're lost within them.

This is an edited version of Susie's introduction to Interesting Stories about Curious Words

ACER IN THE HOLE

Small trees will bring beautiful colour and just enough shade to your garden, says Joe Swift

IF A GARDEN doesn't have a single tree in it, it will always feel as if something is missing. As well as introducing height above, and dappled shade beneath, trees bring a sense of maturity to a space and are great for wildlife. And at this time of year, it's their autumn colours that steal the show.

I know many people are fearful of trees in small gardens, worried they will grow too big, or the roots will damage the foundations. Sure, we need to be sensible and not plant trees like oaks, eucalyptus, or the dreaded cypress leylandii in small gardens, but it shouldn't lead to "choice paralysis" and not planting them at all. As a general rule, make sure that you plant a tree at least its ultimate height away from the house, but many do well even in large containers if fertilised and watered regularly, too.

The majority of Japanese maples stay small and have incredible autumn colour. Acer palmatum "Katsura" grows to around 4m in height and spread and is an ever-changing scene with spring foliage of pale orange, turning a bright green colour in summer, then bright orange again in autumn. Acer palmatum "Seiryu" at around the same size is perfection: a medium tree with lime-green lacy leaves in summer that turn a mix of gold and red in autumn.

Amelanchier Lamarckii (snowy mespilus) is another favourite, bought either as a single stem or more sculptural multi-stemmed tree (which tends to stay smaller) at around 5m tall. It produces white, star-shaped flowers alongside emerging bronze leaves, which turn a fabulous fiery orange and red around now.

 ${\it Cornus\ kousa\ chinensis}\ ({\it Chinese\ dogwood})\ is$ an all-round stunner with showy white bracts in late May, then crimson-purple foliage in autumn and strawberry-like fruit once mature. They're slow-growing to around 5m, and ideally they like a well-drained neutral-to-acid soil.

Sorbus (rowan/mountain ash) flower well, have lovely berries that also attract the birds, and produce strong autumn colour, so they really earn their keep year-round. Sorbus "Chinese Lace" only reaches six metres tall by five metres spread when fully mature, and has deeply cut foliage, white flowers, orange-red berries and gey-red autumn colour. What more could you want? Plant them in autumn/winter in exactly the same way you would shrubs (see column, right) but stake trees low down and remove the stake after a few years.

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Planting deciduous shrubs

This is the ideal time to plant deciduous shrubs (such as viburnums, hydrangeas and cornus). Here are a few golden rules:

- Give the pot a soak before planting.
- Dig a hole around 10cm deeper than the pot depth and two to three times as wide. With compacted soil, fork over the bottom of the hole.
- If the soil is particularly heavy clay, or light and sandy, mix in plenty of organic matter (compost or well-rotted manure) with the spoil. I always add plenty, whatever the soil, as it helps to retain moisture and drain better.
- Knock the plant out of the pot. If the roots are growing round in circles, gently tease them out to encourage them to grow outwards. Snip off damaged roots cleanly with sharp secateurs.

- Use a stick placed across the top of the hole horizontally to make sure that the shrub will end up at the same level it was originally in the pot. Adjust the soil up or dig down as necessary and make sure any roots aren't curled back on themselves.
- Backfill the hole with the soil. Give it a wiggle as you plant to ensure no air gaps. Firm the soil in lightly with your hands or, with larger plants, tread gently with boots.
- Thoroughly water it so the soil contacts the roots.
- Mulch the plant with organic matter to around 5cm without building up against the stem. Water well in dry spells for the first couple of years until well established.

Gino's Italy: Secrets of the South

Sunday 7.30pm ITV1 (11.15pm in Wales)

ETTLING INTO A limestone-paved patio, vines overhead dappling the sunlight on white tablecloths, you await the dish of the day. The owner comes out smiling, brandishing shallow bowls of pasta and sauce the colour of an autumn leaf - it's the local style, orecchiette (named "little ears" for its curved, half-moon shape), doused in a thick pumpkin sauce and topped with crispy lardons. Dark red Salice Salentino wine is sloshed into gobletsized glasses. Life is good.

It could be a scene from Gino's Italy: Secrets of the South, Gino D'Acampo's ITV travelogue, but it could also be your next holiday, because this is a standard way to while away an afternoon in Puglia (sometimes internationally called Apulia), Italy's most fashionable region. Taking up much of the heel of the country's "boot", it's well connected by international flights to Bari Airport, making it more popular than its neighbour, Basilicata - though perhaps that gives Basilicata the edge, leaving it more of a secret. Either way, Puglia has built up the infrastructure and glamorous pit-stops for a classic Italian road trip.

Pick up a hire car in Bari and you can drive to beautiful towns such as Monopoli, Polignano a Mare, Ostuni and Lecce, known as "the Florence of the South"; do it in a packed week or a more leisurely fortnight. You'll see Greek influence in this corner of Italy, particularly in Ostuni (the "White City", with homes that look lifted from a Cycladic island); southern Italy and Sicily were a Greek colony from the eighth century BC.

The way to stay and eat in Puglia is in a masseria, one of the whitewashed farmhouses converted into chic, affordable guesthouses. These have become the tourism lifeblood of a region that once lay forgotten, with little love or investment, in the late 20th century. Many have swimming pools and quality restaurants attached - Masseria Salinola (masseriasalinola.it) was the purveyor of that pumpkin and pork orecchiette, unmistakeably Puglian in its farm-to-fork simplicity.

A company like Sawday's can help you book a multi-stop trail of masserie along the most scenic route, stopping close to the prettiest towns, coves and beaches (sawdays.

co.uk/italy/puglia). They are known for their casual, stayingwith-friends feel many are familyowned and have bicycles to borrow for car-free exploring. Another highlight is a night

TRULI LOVELY Traditional Puglian dry stone huts traditional conical houses you'll see dotted across the countryside.

Far from being down at heel, the back of Italy's boot is a revitalised region that's on the up, as Gino D'Acampo is discovering

Only the truly adventurous will make it to neighbouring Basilicata, a formerly deprived and remote region that's now on the up, thanks to the success of its 2019 European Capital of Culture, Matera. This city has 9,000-year-old cave houses (sassi) that sometimes draw history fans from Naples - a three-hour train away. But it's worth digging into Basilicata properly perhaps extending your road trip through Puglia and heading north from Lecce to Matera in the "arch" of the boot, just over two hours away.

> What these two regions share is a traditional peasant cuisine, cucina povera, which has been preserved and recently elevated in stylish restaurants. Puglia has a greater love of charcuterie, cheeses and fried dough, while Basilicata's country folk tend to pad out their stews with pulses and vegetables.

Must-try dishes in

Puglia include fresh focaccia bread, fave e cicoria (fava beans, puréed with chicory, garlic and oil), crunchy taralli biscuits and panzerotti, half-moons of dough fried in oil and filled with cheese, ham or vegetable sauces.

into Basilicata, you might weave a foodie trail from Matera to the Lucanian Dolomites, where houses sit huddled on the slopes, or coastal Maratea, with its beautiful churches and unspoilt shores.

This side of the heel you can eat chilli- and fennel-laced sausage, along with cavatelli pasta and red beans, or ciaudedda, a stew of artichokes,

ROSSING THE BORDER FOOD QUEST Gino D'Acampo explores Puglia and Basilicata in his latest series

potatoes, fava beans and white wine. Both regions are vegetarian-friendly, sausage aside. Basilicata's ancient name is Lucania, and you'll find many local specialities named lucano or lucana. It's not all rough and rustic, however: Matera's groundbreaking Basquiat Restaurant is garnering rave reviews for its pop-art interiors (basquiatilristorantino.it).

The pace of life is slow in southern Italy, so leave whole days to explore historic towns. Heading back to Bari or Brindisi Airport, you might pick up a bottle of Puglian wine as a memento – Negroamaro is the famous grape of the region, tannic and herbal with a touch of bitterness; while excellent Primitivo and

BEREAVEMENT BENEFITS

Bereaved but unmarried? You could be due backdated child benefits, says Paul Lewis the law means that if you were unmarried but living with a partner who died between 2001 and 8 February 2023, and you were getting child benefit for your children, you may be able to get thousands of pounds in backdated bereavement benefits.

But don't delay. If both conditions apply, you must claim the money soon – the deadline is 8 February 2024. So the hunt is on

'16,000 people are entitled to this money' for an estimated 16,000 people who are entitled to this money but have not yet claimed it.

A major change in the law on 9 February 2023 means bereaved unmarried partners, who had dependent children (or were pregnant) at the time their partner died, are now entitled to bereavement benefits equally with married or civil-partnered parents. This change was forced on the Government by the Supreme Court, which ruled that it was unlawful to exclude children from bereavement benefits just because their parents chose not to be married or in a civil partnership.

The judgement was given on 30

August 2018, and those who would have been entitled to bereavement benefit on that date if the law had always allowed unmarried people to claim, can claim benefits backdated to then. The death itself could go back as far as 2001 if, by 30 August 2018, you would still have been entitled to money for a dependent child. The survivor must have been under state pension age at the time of the death, but the age of the deceased is irrelevant.

F THE DEATH occurred on 6 April 2017 or later, the benefit you can claim is Bereavement Support Payment (BSP), which is a total of £9,800 tax-free and which does not affect other benefits. For earlier deaths, the benefit is Widowed Parent's Allowance (WPA), paid from 30 August 2018 until your youngest child is no longer dependent. That can be worth even more, but is not tax-free and can affect other benefits.

For more information, go to the gov.uk website and search or "bereavement support payment" or call the Bereavement Service helpline on 0800 151 2012.

There's also information at child-hoodbereavementnetwork.org.uk and widowedandyoung.org.uk.

DICTIONARY CORNER Susie Dent

Phrase of the week On cloud nine

There are various expressions involving numerical degrees of happiness. We can be in seventh heaven, which refers to the most exalted of the heavens in Islamic doctrine. We can also occupy cloud nine, which some believe derives from the nine classes of angels in Christian cosmology, in which the seraphim, the highest class, are closest to God.

Another theory involves an 1896 meteorological guide, the International Cloud Atlas, in which the ninth classification was the lofty and fluffy cumulonimbus. But the expression was popularised by a 1950s US radio show in which a fictional insurance investigator called Johnny Dollar was involved in various exploits. Every time he was knocked unconscious, he was taken to "cloud nine" to recover.

WALKING THE LINE

The opening of The News Quiz on Radio 4 is usually replete with finely crafted comments and comical sideways looks at the week's political events.

Broadcasting (on 13 October) within less than a week of tragic events in Israel and Gaza, I wondered how they would manage to open the show. So full marks to presenter Andy Zaltzman, the writers and producers for the sensitive way in which they approached the subject.

Without avoiding the issue, and by delaying the playing of the theme music until it had been addressed, the programme succeeded in walking a very difficult line without diminishing the grittiness for which so many of us tune in each week.

Nicholas Court Ullapool, Highlands

VETS IN STITCHES

I enjoy watching All Creatures Great and Small (Thursdays Channel 5) for several reasons. However, until the second episode of this new series (12 October), l didn't realise it was also a comedy.

The first part of the programme had several pantomime-like moments that made me smile. Then in the last section I laughed out loud when Joe keeled over at the sight of his beloved ferret having to go under the knife. I hope he had a good mattress to land on!

The casting of James Bolam as an elderly farmer was the icing on the cake. It brought back recollections of him as Terry in The Likely Lads with the immortal phrase "a swift half".

Pauline Bearcock

GAMBON'S FINEST HOUR

I was so pleased to see RT's lovely tribute to Sir Michael Gambon (RT, 21 October). Many of us, as fans of his Singing Detective and a magical Dumbledore, will miss him greatly.

It's hard to recall a time when the news has been as upsetting as it is at the moment. Every day we hear about terrorism, reprisals, bigotry, war and environmental catastrophe. I'm sure I'm not the only one who regularly has to switch off the news in despair.

How sad, then, not to have a programme to look forward to that brings hope and life to our screens: I'm talking about Autumnwatch (BBC2), which was axed in February. If there was ever a time when viewers deserved some relief from the follies of the human world, surely it's now. I want to add my voice to all who regret the loss of one of the Watches.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

What a shame there wasn't anything in RT about Blue Peter's 65th birthday. Here is a programme that spells out all of the BBC's remits, has crossed generations and yet is lost in the noise of the media, and shows no sign of a bus pass yet.

A LOCAL LOSS

I will never forgive the BBC for its treatment of local radio. Favourite shows and presenters moved or removed. At weekends hardly any news of local events or interests. (Why, would I, in Worcestershire, want to know how a housewife in Bedford was spending her Saturday?) The new presenters seem only able to play an endless succession of pop music.

The BBC has lost its way on this, as it has done on many things recently.

John Jervis

IT'S PERSONAL

I disagree strongly with John Gage (Feedback, 14 October) on the subject of Victoria Coren Mitchell. She has clearly inherited the humour gene from her father Alan Coren, and her slightly off-the-wall reveries, which top and tail Only

INTO THE RUCK

I have enjoyed the Rugby World Cup immensely, apart from one aspect – the quality of the ITV commentary team.

For David Flatman and Scott Hastings I have nothing but praise, but as for the rest: despite prefacing their remarks with "with all due respect", they consistently failed to show any for the secondtier nations, and indeed, for any team they expected to come off second best.

The majority of the commentary team were English and made no attempt to disguise their bias. Ugo Monye was particularly guilty of this, practically drooling every time a member of the England team so much as caught the ball.

Bill McLaren, a proud Scot. and Eddie Butler, a passionate Welshman, were scrupulous in their neutrality for the BBC. Obviously ITV has less stringent standards.

Patricia Lee Hammond

Abercynon, Rhondda Cynon Taf Turn to Simon Barnes on the final: page 27.

A VIEW FROM THE HILL

I have watched Gardeners' World (BBC2) for more years than I care to remember. On 13 October it was a treat to see Frances Tophill present the programme. No disrespect to Monty Don, but what a breath of fresh air she was.

We got to see a different garden, and a beautiful orchard on a steep hillside - how topical for the time of year. Please can we see more

APPARENTLY ACTORS IN EASTENDERS CAN GO A WHOLE EPISODE WITHOUT DRINKING

EMPTY GESTURES

When will programme-makers put some liquid in paper cups? On EastEnders (17 October BBC1), Rocky placed a paper cup in front of Harvey that clearly had nothing in it. The same hollowness could be heard when he put his own cup down. The BBC is not alone in doing this, but every time it happens I find myself shouting, "Put something in the cup!'

KABIN KEEPER

Barbara Knox at 90 (13 October ITV1) was a moving tribute to the very talented Coronation Street star who has been playing Rita for more than 50 years, having started before many of the current cast and crew were born.

In Rita's shop, the Kabin, her brilliant partnership with the wonderful Thelma Barlow as Mavis allowed Barbara to develop Rita's style of wise and witty reflections, often in reaction to Mavis's nervous dithering. The programme included a touching reunion as they looked back at scenes of Mavis's departure from Weatherfield.

Rita, having fostered several children, embodies values that are still relevant to Coronation Street today: the importance of friendship, family and community.

Barbara Knox at 90 was an uplifting birthday celebration that helped us to appreciate why the world's longest-serving female soap star is still such an asset to Coronation Street.

Jackie Hickton Leeds

WHAT IS THE BBC UP TO? BBC cutbacks are now getting ridiculous. There was no need to bring back BBC3 to broadcast television as the situation when it went online hasn't changed new programmes are also shown on BBC1 and of course are available on iPlayer. Rather than persist with multiple screenings for a minority channel, the money saved by moving it online again could go towards the daytime budget and possibly save Doctors [which, it has been announced, will be axed at the end of 2024].

The BBC won't admit they made a mistake by bringing back BBC3 and it's becoming a more expensive mistake by the week. Meanwhile, the BBC clearly still believes in online channels - just ask BBC4 and CBBC, which are both destined to go online.

Where is Make It at Market's lovely location?

On Make It at Market (13 October BBC1), I was delighted to see the work of potter Izzy Letty - one of whose cups I own, having bought it at a local craft studio where a friend also picked up a couple of her lovely candlesticks. I hope this is just the start of a successful ceramics career for her.

It was the first time I've seen the series and its gorgeous location. Where was it filmed? Isabel McLoughlin, London SE10 Series one, currently showing again on Fridays and presented by The Repair Shop's Dom Chinea, was first broadcast in January. It pairs craftspeople with expert mentors to see if the amateurs can make a go of selling what they produce and turn their hobby into a thriving business.

It was filmed at the beautiful Arts and Crafts cottage Stoneywell, at Ulverscroft in Leicestershire, which

The second series began filming this July, Chinea revealed on Instagram, and is set to air in November. But the location has moved from Stoneywell to Waterperry Gardens in Oxfordshire.

As for Winchester-born Izzy Letty, who gave up a career in advertising in order to try to become a full-time potter, she tells RT: "The show helped me reach a new audience with my pots and the practical advice from my mentor, Florian Gadsby, was invaluable. I don't think I have ever seen so many men in tights, or indeed so much gore in battle! Many thanks, BBC, for screening The Wars of the Roses (1964) and The Hollow Crown (2012), both adaptations of Shakespeare's history plays (BBC4/iPlayer). It's been absolutely fascinating to see such marvellous performances over so many decades, and the introductions by people involved are a real bonus. Those of us who love the history plays are really blessed.

I even remember the original showings of some of the productions, so being retired I have the time to watch this cornucopia - worth the TV licence alone!

CHARLOTTE SMITH

The Countryfile presenter loves working with farmers, rambling – and The Archers

What's the view from your sofa? It's a Victorian house in London, so there's a fireplace and so on... the main thing is that we've got a new rug – our children (she has two, Maddy and Sam, with journalist husband, Mike) are teenagers now so we're feeling confident about it! The telly is a bone of contention because the kids say it's too small.

Who controls the remote?

Whoever can find it!

What have you been watching recently?

The Wheel of Time on Amazon – I admit, I spent a lot of it being confused. The rest of the family were just as baffled! I would binge the whole of Ted Lasso, but my husband is making me eke it out.

Any TV turn-offs?

I'll watch pretty much anything, although I had to stop watching The Handmaid's Tale because it got a bit much. I didn't watch it for years because it's my favourite book and I worried that they'd muck it up, but it was brilliant.

Why is Countryfile so popular?

We're quite an urban society, and it shows us what's happening in the countryside – not just farming. And it's relatively slow, isn't it? Very Sunday night, with a cup of tea or glass of wine.

Do you fear for British farming?

I'm a natural pessimist, which makes my farmer friends laugh – you have to be an optimist to farm. Change is always hard, but if you take away the Common Agricultural Policy and the payments that went with it, then bring in different systems at a different pace across the four nations, it will have a massive impact. The rest of us don't really appreciate how difficult that is, but I hope we reflect that on radio and telly.

Has rural life always appealed to you?

No, like most people who grew up in a village, I counted the days until

I could leave. I knew farmers, but I was never particularly interested. I started out on daytime TV in Birmingham in the 90s – one day I made an inelegant descent on a fireman's pole, which perhaps inspired something! I then got into a lift and was asked if I'd present a programme the next day; it was Farming Today. I love working with farmers. They tell you exactly what they think, then buy you a pint. It's a fascinating world. Thank God, I didn't take the stairs!

You're also a big Archers fan?

Since I was about 25, and I'm 59 now. Everybody else in the house will run to turn it off, but I love it because they can take years over a plot and you can dip in and out. I recently judged at the BBC Food and Farming Awards with Lucy Speed; she's a really talented actress but, to me, she's Stella from The Archers. She was very patient with me!

The Countryfile Ramble for BBC Children in Need started in 2015 – what's the idea behind it?

Viewers are sponsored to get out in the

HOME COMFORTS

BOOK

I'm the child of librarians, so I read all the time – I've just reread Rooted by Sarah Langford because I'm reviewing it.

RADIO

You know where I am in the house because the radio is on – Radio 4, Radio 2 or Times Radio. I like the randomness. countryside, whether it's a walk up a mountain or a little toddle. This year, I went to Leicestershire, about six miles from Quorn, where I grew up, and met a boy called Joey, who has cerebral palsy. He's had a lot of help from a group called Steps Conductive Education, and an operation to stop his legs spasming. Now, he walks with a walker and he's in mainstream school – a typical seven-year-old kid: fun, grumpy, cheeky...

Has it given you a new perspective on BBC Children in Need?

Definitely. I always thought it was this massive thing, but actually it supports tiny charities run by people who have a huge impact on families and individuals. That's really impressed me.

What's so good about rambling?

We all know how beneficial it is to be in nature, and if you're walking then you're taking it all in. In our busy lives, taking time to do that is lovely.
